

What is the CIM?

- A Unified Modeling Language (UML) based information model representing real-world objects and information entities exchanged within the value chain of the electric power industry
 - Maintained by IEC in the Sparx Enterprise Architect modeling tool
- Enable integration of applications/systems
 - Provides a common model behind all messages exchanged between systems
 - Basis for defining information exchange models
- Enable data access in a standard way
 - Common language to navigate and access complex data structures in any database
 - Provides a hierarchical view of data for browsing and access with no knowledge of actual logical schema
 - Inspiration for logical data schemas (e.g., for an operational data store)
- Not tied to a particular application's view of the world
 - But permits same model to be used by all applications to facilitate information sharing between applications
