Reorganizing the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gordon Lederman,1999-11-30 The Goldwater Nichols Department of Defense Reorganization Act of 1986 is the most important legislation to affecting U S national defense in the last 50 years This act resulted from frustration in Congress and among certain military officers concerning what they believed to be the poor quality of military advice available to civilian decision makers It also derived from the U S military s perceived inability to conduct successful joint or multi service operations The act passes after four years of legislative debate designated the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as the principal military advisor to the President and sought to foster greater cooperation among the military services Goldwater Nichols marks the latest attempt to balance competing tendencies within the Department of Defense namely centralization versus decentralization and geographic versus functional distributions of power As a result of the Goldwater Nichols Act the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs has achieved prominence but his assignment is somewhat contradictory the spokesman and thus the advocate for the Commander in Chief while simultaneously the provider of objective advice to the President While the act did succeed in strengthening the CINCs authority and in contributing to the dramatic U S achievements in the Gulf War the air and ground campaigns revealed weaknesses in the CINCs capability to plan joint operations In addition the increased role of the military in ad hoc peacekeeping operations has challenged the U S military s current organizational structure for the quick deployment of troops from the various services Rapid technological advances and post Cold War strategic uncertainty also complicate the U S military s organizational structure

Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications United States. Superintendent of Documents,1995 Civil Society and the Security Sector Marina Caparini,Philipp Fluri,Ferenc Molnár,2006 This volume analyses the role of civil society in the reform and oversight of the security sector in post communist countries as a key aspect of the transition towards democracy It is widely accepted that civil society actors have an important contribution to make in the governance of the security sector However that specific role has not been subject to much close or comparative examination This book constitutes an attempt to examine and compare experiences of civil society participation in security oversight across Central and Eastern Europe The first part of the volume presents the reader with the theoretical and conceptual background against which the potential role of civil society in security sector governance can be understood and assessed. The remainder of the book is comprised of nine country studies of civil society engagement with the security sector. Reviewing developments over the past 15 years of regime transformation in the region, the book draws upon a rich variety of cases that cast light on the different experiences, challenges and successes of civil society actors and the media in democratisation, security sector reform and the exercise of democratic oversight of the security sector.

Guarding the Guardians Mathurin C. Hounnikpo, 2016-04-22 The relationship between civil society and the armed forces is an essential part of any polity, democratic or otherwise, because a military force is after all a universal feature of social systems. Despite significant progress moving towards democracy among some African countries in the past decade, all too many African militaries have yet to accept core democratic principles regulating civilian authority over the military. This book explores the theory of civil-military relations and moves on to review the intrusion of the armed forces in African politics by looking first into the organization and role of the army in pre-colonial and colonial eras, before examining contemporary armies and their impact on society. Furthermore, it revisits the various explanations of military takeovers in Africa and disentangles the notion of the military as the modernizing force. Whether as a revolutionary force, as a stabilizing force, or as a modernizing force, the military has often been perceived as the only organized and disciplined group with the necessary skills to uplift newly independent nations. The performance of Africa's military governments since independence, however, has soundly disproven this thesis. As such, this study conveys the necessity of new civil-military relations in Africa and calls not just for civilian control of the military, but rather a democratic oversight of the security forces in Africa.

Preparing for Peace Volker Franke, 1999-11-30 Since the end of the Cold War, U.S. military forces have participated in an increasingly complex array of military operations, from disaster relief and peacekeeping to deadly combat. The unique nature of many of these missions calls into question what it means to be a soldier and may require adjustments not only in military doctrine but also in the military's combat-oriented warrior identity. Franke examines the extent to which individuals who will lead U.S. forces in the 21st century are prepared cognitively to shift among mission requirements. Using survey methods, Franke explores the social, political, and professional attitudes and values of cadets at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. By comparing cadets' responses across classes, he assesses the effects of military socialization on their commitment to the military's dual mission: purpose and their cognitive preparation for combat and non-combat assignments. By developing a dynamic model of social identity, Franke extends the applicability of social identity theory from the experimental laboratory environment to a genuine social field setting. Assessing the dynamic relationship between identity values and attitudes for identifications that are normatively meaningful to respondents, he illustrates the importance of individuals' identification with social groups for their behavioral choices.

Canada Among Nations, 1996 Fen Osler Hampson, Maureen Appel Molot, 1996-01-01 Canada is a relatively small player on the world scene but is still big enough to be heard. The theme of this year's volume of Canada

Among Nations is the need for choices in Canadian foreign policy In an environment of fiscal constraint the necessity of choice is related to establishing priorities within the multitude of international organizations to which Canada belongs If we can no longer afford to be a member of a large number of international institutions which memberships will we uphold and on what grounds will we decide These questions and others are addressed from a variety of standpoints As in the past each article in Canada Among Nations is a free standing contribution Contributors have their own distinctive viewpoints and perspectives on where Canada stands in the community of nations and where the country s foreign policy priorities should lie

U.S. Foreign Policy and the UN System Frances K. Scott,1995 Special Bibliography Series ,1957 The Blood Of Abraham, "Intifada, Uprising & Lessons In Asymmetrical Warfare" Major David A. Brown,2015-11-06 A historical case study concerning the Israeli Army s response to the Palestinian Intifada or uprising in the late 1980 s and early 1990 s provides instructive planning considerations for likely future application of U S military force in an asymmetrical threat environment The monograph specifically analyzes the time period from the beginning of the uprising until the handshake of Rabin and Arafat on the White House lawn September 13th 1993 Although the theoretical application of the case study is speculative of future environments this paper attempts to link available historical data to anticipated trends in the international security environment and emerging concepts of operational art The argument surrounding asymmetrical types of warfare leads into a discussion of the application of IDF lessons learned that may be applied to future U S military scenarios
