Nutritional Therapy Featuring The Core Program For Diet Revision:

Nutritional Therapy Featuring the Core Program for Diet Revision Stephen Gislason, 1991 Digestive Disorders

Stephen Gislason MD, 2016-05-19 The book Digestive Disorders is dedicated to the intelligent reader who wants to understand and manage his or her digestive tract disorder. The book covers a range of problems from milder but unpleasant symptoms that recur over many years to serious life threatening diseases. The book is available in printed and eBook editions and interfaces with the Alpha Nutrition Program a standard method of diet revision. From the Introduction There are at least 100 million people in the USA and Canada that have recurrent long term gastrointestinal symptoms. Abdominal pain, distension, with excess gas, constipation and diarrhea are the four prominent symptoms. Most members of this large group will self medicate and suffer long term. Some will receive the diagnosis of irritable bowel syndrome along with inappropriate advice and medication with limited efficacy. Some will emerge from this large symptomatic group with well defined disease. The rest of the symptomatic population will remain by default sufferers of the irritable bowel syndrome. Most members of this symptomatic group will have other dysfunction associated with and probably caused by their digestive problems. Crohn's disease, Celiac disease and Ulcerative Colitis are three of the more serious diagnoses. These digestive tract diseases are immune mediated with increased permeability of the digestive tract and are associated with a long list of whole body immune mediated diseases. Patients with these conditions are often symptomatic for many years before the diagnosis is made. The main difference between Celiac and Crohn's disease is that celiac patients are told to change their diet and improve when they remove gluten from their diet. Crohn's patients are not told to change their diet and often follow a deteriorating path of chronic disease, some with episodic crises that require surgery, prolonged hospitalization and permanent disability. We believe these conditions are related in terms of disease causing mechanisms and recommend that all groups of patients follow a similar protocol of diet revision. The main difference is that acute inflammation of the bowel wall in a Crohn's patient can be dangerous and requires a food holiday, sometimes for several weeks. Food is replaced by Alpha ENF with optional additional nutrients.

Aching & Fatigue Stephen Gislason, 2017-07-24 The book Aching Fatigue is about non specific illnesses and two common patterns of illness, the Chronic Fatigue Syndrome and Fibromyalgia. Some patients say I feel sick all over. These are overlapping symptom complexes and are often part of a larger illness complex. The general classification is non specific hypersensitivity disease. Dr Gislason explains why diet revision as the first and most essential form of therapy. Long term management of food intake is required to sustain improvements. The book Aching Fatigue describes these common problems and their solution, providing case history examples. Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, CFS, Fibromyalgia and related disorders are not discrete diseases in the usual sense but patterns of maladaptive responses to food and the environment. We believe that chronic fatigue syndrome and Fibromyalgia are symptom complexes and are often caused by delayed pattern food allergy. Both conditions tend to co exist and both are part of a larger illness complex. The general classification is non specific.
