Malnutrition And Brain Development:

Malnutrition and Brain Development Myron Winick, 1976 Reviews the evidence from experimental and clinical studies that malnutrition early in life is associated with retarded brain development Nutrition and Brain Development Govind A. Dhopeswarkar, 2012-03-30 The effect of nutrition on the vital process of brain development has received increased attention in the last two decades Using animal models experimental research scientists have accumulated a wealth of information and epidemiological studies of field workers have brought the animals and human studies together Most times there is an agreement on the results of animal and human experiences but occasionally a voice of uncertainty is heard when results of animal studies are extrapolated to humans After all the human brain is far more complex than that of other species and comparisons are not always accurate Behavioral scientists have attempted to correlate the findings of the biochemists and neurochemists to the working of the brain Severe effects of malnutrition on body growth and function can usually be reversed by corrective procedures But when such effects include the impact on brain development the outcome can be devastating Underdevelopment of the brain caused by malnutrition during early life may not respond to corrective measures in later life Undoubtedly this is a very controversial issue and the final verdict has not been reached Unfortunately even with today's tremendous technological innovations and applications there are millions of people including infants and children who cannot obtain adequate food and are therefore exposed to damaging effects on the orderly development of the central and peripheral nervous system Thus this is a critical issue to many struggling populations who can ill afford such deprivation

The relationship of nutrition to brain development and behavior National Research Council (U.S.). Subcommittee on Nutrition, Brain Development, and Behavior, David B. Coursin, Nutrition and the Developing Brain Victoria Hall Moran, Nicola M. Lowe, 2016-08-05 Nutrients play a significant role in brain development throughout fetal and postnatal life This book reviews the evidence from animal and human research highlighting the influence of specific nutrients on brain function and cognitive development With a unique integrative approach to the nutritional environmental and genetic influences on brain development the book examines issues such as single versus multiple limiting nutrients critical periods of deficiency and the impact of the child parent relationship on the architecture of the developing brain The effect of undernutrition on the developing brain of infants and young children can be devastating and enduring It can impede behavioural and cognitive development and educability thereby undermining future work productivity Chapter authors are experts in this field of research and provide an up to date insight into the role of the individual nutrients in brain development and function The Relationship of Perinatal Malnutrition to Brain Development E. J. Hawrylewicz, B. F. Chow, 1971 (Mal)Nutrition and the Infant Brain Nico M. van Gelder, Roger F. Butterworth, Boris D. Drujan, 1990-08-08 The papers presented at this conference discuss the proper maturation of the brain and the development of optimum intelligence in a child which depends on three essential factors the inborn genetic directives the complexity of the environment and adequate nutrition Overall the conference participants examine the impact of nutritional and social parameters on anatomic and neurochemical maturation of the infant brain Nutrition and Psychiatric Disorders Wael Mohamed,Firas Kobeissy,2022-10-03 The book comprehensively reviews the role of nutrition in psychiatric disorders It provides mechanistic insights into the effects of nutrition on metabolic pathways mitochondrial nutrients neurodegeneration and CNS disorders cell signaling and neuronal functions The book further highlights the role of diet in preventing and treating mental health and modifying drug treatment effects Further it explores the relationship between nutrition and psychiatric disorders including depression autism anxiety Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder and OCD The book further explores the recent advancements in understanding the important role of nutrients as therapeutics in various psychiatric disorders Lastly it presents an overview of nutrients as neuroprotective agents along with the main principles of nutrigenomics The book is essential reading for neuroscientists interested in food therapeutic strategies

DEVELOPMENT IN RATS submitted by Wang Ling for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at The University of Hong Kong in August 2006 The perinatal period the period around the time of birth is critical for brain development in most mammalian species Numerous studies reported in the literature have shown that nutritional insults during this period can cause life long impairment in various brain functions including learning and memory function How perinatal malnutrition leads to impairment in brain learning and memory function is still unclear An emerging theory suggests that nutritional factors may modulate critical gene expression and subsequently lead to the functional alteration More recent studies have shown that brain derived neurotrophic factor BDNF plays a crucial role in brain learning and memory function The objective of the present study was to investigate the effects of perinatal malnutrition on BDNF gene expression in the brain and the effects on spatial learning and memory function Laboratory rats Wistar and Sprague Dawley strains were used as an animal model Pregnant or lactating rats were subjected to various types of nutritional insults including calorie restriction protein malnutrition or n 3 fatty acid deficiency and their offspring were evaluated for the spatial learning and memory performance using the Morris water maze test The concentrations of BDNF and BDNF mRNA in various regions of the brain were determined using enzyme linked immunosorbent assay ELISA and real time reverse transcription polymerase chain reaction RT PCR respectively It was found that prenatal 50% calorie restriction significantly reduced the levels of BDNF and its mRNA in hippocampus Calorie restriction also caused significant impairment in spatial learning ability in the rats The effects appeared to be proportionate to the duration of prenatal calorie restriction The effects of perinatal protein malnutrition on spatial learning and memory performance and BDNF gene expression varied in rats depending on the time and duration of the dietary insults Rats fed with a low protein diet 6% vs 20% in control during the four weeks period after birth showed poor spatial learning and memory performance at ten weeks of age accompanied with significant decrease in BDNF and its mRNA concentrations in hippocampus Rats subjected to the low protein diet two weeks before and four weeks after birth also showed a significantly poor learning and memory performance at four but not ten weeks of age Moderate decrease in BDNF concentration was observed in the cerebral cortex and hippocampus Dietary n 3 fatty acid deficiency for three generations led to significant depletion of docosahexaenoic acid DHA in the brain tissue Rats with depleted brain DHA showed dramatic impairment in learning and memory ability at four and ten weeks of age BDNF mRNA concentration was also significantly reduced in the cerebral cortex and hippocampus in DHA depleted rat pups at four weeks of age In conclusion results of the present study indicate that perinatal malnutrition generally reduces BDNF gene expression in the brain and causes impairment in spatial learning and memory performance Severity of the effect increases with an increased duration of the nu
