Modernity's Wager Authority The Self And Transcendence:

Modernity's Wager Adam B. Seligman, 2009-02-09 Adam Seligman one of our most important social thinkers continues the incisive critique of modernity he began in his previously acclaimed The Idea of Civil Society and The Problem of Trust In this provocative new work of social philosophy Seligman evaluates modernity's wager namely the gambit to liberate the modern individual from external social and religious norms by supplanting them with the rational self as its own moral authority Yet far from ensuring the freedom of the individual Seligman argues the fundamentalist doctrine of enlightened reason has called into being its own nemesis in the forms of ethnic racial and identity politics Seligman counters that the modern human must recover a notion of authority that is essentially transcendent but which extends tolerance to those of other or no faiths Through its denial of an authority rooted in an experience of transcendence modernity fails to account for individual and collective moral action First deprived of a sacred source of the self depictions of moral action are reduced to motives of self interest Second dismissing the sacred leaves the resurgence of religious movements unexplained In this rigorous and imaginative study Seligman seeks to discover a durable source of moral authority in a liberalized world His study of shame pride collective guilt and collective responsibility demonstrates the mutual relationship between individual responsibility and communal authority Furthermore Seligman restores the indispensable role of religious traditions as well as the features of those traditions that enhance rather than denigrate tolerance Sociologists political theorists moral philosophers and intellectual historians will find Seligman's thesis enlightening as will anyone concerned with the ethical and religious foundations of a tolerant society

Dissident Women, Beguines, and the Quest for Spiritual Authority Catherine Lambert, 2024-11-12 Dissident Women Beguines and the Quest for Spiritual Authority focuses on the responses of a group of twenty first century women to the lives and writings of thirteenth century beguine mystics and reveals how the struggle to discover their own inner spiritual authority connects two groups of women across centuries For contemporary women who are disenchanted with the institutional church and who seek spiritual direction models deeply rooted within the tradition may not be the most helpful The author explores the value of exemplars from the fringes ushering Hadewijch of Brabant Mechthild of Magdeburg and Marguerite Porete into the spotlight The contemporary women studied developed a relationship with the beguines that transformed and influenced their own journeys Their encounters underline the importance of remembering the beguine mystics the value of contemplative engagement with historical mystics and the need for explicit validation of the richness of the edges of tradition within spiritual direction Dissident Women Beguines and the Quest for Spiritual Authority will be of particular interest to scholars of mysticism and spirituality as well as practical pastoral and feminist theology

Alessandro Ferrara,2014-03-24 Alessandro Ferrara explains what he terms the democratic horizon and reviews the challenges under which democracies must operate The Righting of Passage A. David Napier,2004-04-19 Today much theory in the social sciences assumes that the acceptance of experience as inevitably unruly means that it is characterized by constant change and even by chaos In such a world we are told the unordered qualities of daily living create so much uncertainty that identity itself becomes unstable But this view David Napier argues begs a fundamental question if contemporary life is as flexible and unstructured as for example postmodernists maintain and we in turn are products of such a world how might any of us order our thinking enough to recognize what is meaningful in life let alone describe our experiences in ways that might have meaning for others If we are truly the products of modernity Napier says we must either accept our inability to structure and shape our own sensations or alternately argue for some form of humanism that sees a struggling existential self living unsettled within its unstructured environment Were either circumstance universally the case the world would of course be a rather different place for there would be no shared literature called postmodern and there would be no one to dissect such experience for us no authors with coherent identities no theories that could be communicated no books bought or read no university departments dedicated to the industry of chaos In short there would be no ordered space for interpersonal understanding in such a world This is the premise that informs The Righting of Passage In this challenging book Napier offers a novel argument that accounts for diffuse and flexible notions of the self while also illustrating how a coherent communicating self persists amid such apparent instability This he does by arguing something entirely counterintuitive to both modernist and postmodernist positions namely that modernity s increasing separation of embodiment from meaning not only slows down human transformation but attenuates human growth by encouraging us to perceive risk as largely pathological Today the combined forces of stress management depth psychology therapeutic writing dislocated meaning and of institutional conformity work together to produce a reduction not a proliferation of change in human life Religious Literacy, Law and History Alberto Melloni,Francesca Cadeddu,2018-12-07 The book profiles some of the macro and micro factors that have impact on European religious literacy It seeks to understand religious illiteracy and its effects on the social and political milieu through the framing of the historical institutional religious social juridical and educational conditions within which it arises Divided into four parts in the first one One literacy more literacies the book defines the basic concepts underpinning the question of religious illiteracy in Europe Part II Understanding illiteracies debating disciplines highlights the theological philosophical historical and political roots of the phenomenon looking at the main nodes that are both the reasons religious illiteracy is widespread and the starting points for literacy strategies Part III Building literacy shaping alphabets examines the mix of knowledge and competences acquired about religion and from religion at school as well as through the media with a critical perspective on what could be done both in the schools and for the improvement of journalists religious literacy Part IV Views and experiences presents the reader with the opportunity to learn from three different case studies religious literacy in the media religious illiteracy and European Islam and a Jewish approach to religious literacy Building on existing literature the volume takes a scientific approach which is enriched by interdisciplinary and transnational perspectives and deep entrenchment in historical methodology
