The Tertiary Record of Rodents in North America William W. Korth, 2013-11-21 Nearly half of the known species of mammals alive today more than 1600 are rodents or gnawing mammals Nowak and Paradiso 1983 The diversity of rodents is greater than that of any other order of mammals Thus it is not surprising that the fossil record of this order is extensive and fossil material of rodents from the Tertiary is known from all continents except Antarctica and Australia The purpose of this book is to compile the published knowledge on fossil rodents from North America and present it in a way that is accessible to paleontologists and mammalogists interested in evolutionary studies of rodents The literature on fossil rodents is widely scattered between journals on paleontology and mammalogy and in house publications of museums and universities Currently there is no single source that offers ready access to the literature on a specific family of rodents and its fossil history This work is presented as a reference text that can be useful to specialists in rodents fossil or recent as well as mammalian paleontologists working on whole faunas Because the diversity of rodents in the world is essentially limitless any monograph that included all fossil rodents would similarly be limitless Hence this book is limited to the record of Tertiary rodents of North America The several species of South American caviomorph rodents that invaded North America near the end of the Tertiary are also not included in this text Oligocene Rodents of North America Albert E. Management of Amphibians, Reptiles, and Small Mammals in North America Robert C. Szaro, Kieth E. Severson, David R. Patton, 1988 Historically the management of public lands from a multiple use perspective has led to a system that emphasizes those habitat components or faunal elements that primarily resulted in some sort of definable economic value While this often benefitted other species that were not even considered in the original prescriptions it also negatively impacted others We no longer can afford to take this simplistic view of ecosystem management We need to use a more holistic approach where ecological landscapes are considered as units and land management practices incorporate all elements into an integrated policy This includes examining the impacts of proposed land uses on amphibian reptile and small mammal populations
