

Quite often the records of a trial include a copy of the whole of the defendant's indentured abjuration, and not just the statement that he abjured. Robert Cavell, who was a priest, read his own abjuration.³⁴ But the other abjurations are preceded by statements to the effect that the defendant, unable to read because he was a layman or because his sight was poor, appointed a cleric to read it for him. While Cavell's abjuration appears in Latin, the others are in English, and they make up almost all of the manuscript that is in the vernacular. The abjurations appear as the first-person statements of the defendants. As regards content, they contain little that has not already been mentioned: basically they consist of a list of the offences, the defendant's admission of his guilt, his oath renouncing his heresies and oaths concerning his good conduct in the future.³⁵

This, then, is the information most commonly found in the manuscript. Of the remainder, two types of records need to be mentioned: depositions of witnesses³⁶ and letters from the bishop of Norwich to the parish priests of men found guilty of heresy, instructing them to see that the men performed their penances.³⁷

In addition to the manuscript, the relevant sections of the records of a delivery of the gaol in Norwich Castle are included as an appendix. The records, which were hitherto unknown and which are the only records of gaol deliveries involving the defendants mentioned in the manuscript that are known to survive, throw interesting light on the arrests and earlier activities of several of the accused.

i. The Trials

In the spring of 1428 Bishop Fleming of Lincoln had what were supposed to be Wycliffe's bones dug up and burnt, and the ashes cast into a nearby stream.³⁸ Indeed, the year 1428 saw the beginning of what seems to have been a concerted persecution of Lollardy all over the province of Canterbury,³⁹ led by the archbishop himself, who is reported to have ridden for several days and nights hunting down suspects.⁴⁰ As well as a response to the internal problem of heresy in England, which the Convocation of Canterbury province meeting in London in July 1428 had declared to be 'more than usually growing in strength',⁴¹ the persecution was no doubt

Norwich Heresy Trials 142831 Camden Fourth Ser Vol 20:

Reading Families Rebecca L. Krug, 2018-09-05 Rebecca Krug argues that in the later Middle Ages people defined themselves in terms of family relationships but increasingly saw their social circumstances as being connected to the written word. Complex family dynamics and social configurations motivated women to engage in text-based activities. Although not all or even the majority of women could read and write, it became natural for women to think of writing as a part of everyday life. Reading Families looks at the literate practice of two individual women, Margaret Paston and Margaret Beaufort, and of two communities in which women were central: the Norwich Lollards and the Bridgettines at Syon Abbey. The book begins with Paston's letters, which were written at her husband's request, and ends with devotional texts that describe the spiritual daughterhood of the Bridgettine readers. Scholars often assume that medieval women's participation in literate culture constituted a rejection of patriarchal authority. Krug maintains, however, that for most women, learning to engage with the written word served as a practical response to social changes and was not necessarily a revolutionary act.

Indulgences in Late Medieval England R. N. Swanson, 2007-12-13 This book presents a history of indulgences or pardons in late medieval England.

The Cambridge Companion to Medieval English Literature 1100-1500 Larry Scanlon, 2009-06-18 A wide-ranging survey of the most important medieval authors and genres designed for students of English.

Gender and Heresy Shannon McSheffrey, 2010-11-24 Shannon McSheffrey studies the communities of the late medieval English heretics, the Lollards, and presents unexpected conclusions about the precise ways in which gender shaped participation and interaction within the movement.

Performances of the Sacred in Late Medieval and Early Modern England, 2005-01-01 Communities have often shaped themselves around cultural spaces set apart and declared sacred. For this purpose, churches, priests, or scholars, no less than writers, frequently participate in giving sacred figures a local habitation and sometimes voice or name. But whatever sites, rites, images, or narratives have thus been constructed, they also raise some complex questions: how can the sacred be presented and yet guarded, claimed yet concealed, staged in public and at the same time kept exclusive? Such questions are pursued here in a variety of English texts historically employed to manifest and manage versions of the sacred. But since their performances inhabit social space, this often functions as a theatrical arena which is also used to stage modes of dissent, difference, sacrifice, and sacrilege. In this way, all aspects of social life—the family, the nation, the idea of kingship, gender identities, courtly ideals, love, making or smoking—may become sacralized and buttress claims for power by recourse to a repertoire of religious symbolic forms. Through critical readings of central texts and authors such as Sir Gawain, Foxe, Sidney, Shakespeare, Donne, or Vaughan, as well as less canonical examples like the Croxton play, Buchanan Lanyer, Wroth, or the tobacco pamphlets, the twelve contributions all engage with the crucial question: how and to what end? Performances of the sacred affect or effect cultural transformation.

The Politics of Pearl John M. Bowers, 2001 Close analysis of the poem reveals extensive allusion to contemporary social, religious, and political events.

The Growth of English Schooling,

1340-1548 Jo Ann Hoeppe Morán, 2014-07-14 In contrast to the prevailing view this book reveals the educational revolution of the 1500s to have grown from an earlier expansion of elementary and grammar education in the fourteenth, fifteenth and early sixteenth centuries. Originally published in 1985, The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print-on-demand technology to again make available previously out-of-print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press. These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions. The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905. Broken Idols of the English Reformation, Religion and Devotion in Europe, C.1215- C.1515 Robert Norman Swanson, 1995-06-29 Underlying the discussion are basic questions about the format of medieval religious experience ranging from the nature of authority to the relationship between priests and laity and how far it is actually possible to talk of a monolithic catholicism.

Mary Magdalene and the Drama of Saints Theresa Coletti, 2013-11-15 A sinner saint who embraced then renounced sexual and worldly pleasures, a woman who through her attachment to Jesus embodied both erotic and sacred power, a symbol of penance and an exemplar of contemplative and passionate devotion: perhaps no figure stood closer to the center of late medieval debates about the sources of spiritual authority and women's contribution to salvation history than did Mary Magdalene. And perhaps nowhere in later medieval England was cultural preoccupation with the Magdalene stronger than in fifteenth-century East Anglia. Looking to East Anglian texts including the N-Town Plays, The Book of Margery Kempe, The Revelations of Julian of Norwich and Bokenham's Legend of Holy Women, Theresa Coletti explores how the gendered symbol of Mary Magdalene mediates tensions between masculine and feminine spiritual power, institutional and individual modes of religious expression, and authorized and unauthorized forms of revelation and sacred speech. Using the Digby play Mary Magdalene as her touchstone, Coletti engages a wide variety of textual and visual resources to make evident the discursive and material ties of East Anglian dramatic texts and feminine religion to broader traditions of cultural commentary and representation. In bringing the disciplinary perspectives of literary history and criticism, gender studies and social and religious history to bear on specific local instances of dramatic practice, Mary Magdalene and the Drama of Saints highlights the relevance of Middle English dramatic discourse to the dynamic religious climate of late medieval England. In doing so, the book decisively challenges the marginalization of drama within medieval English studies, elucidates vernacular theater's kinship with influential late medieval religious texts and institutions, and articulates the changing possibilities for sacred representation in the decades before the Reformation.

The Unorthodox Imagination in Late Medieval Britain Sophie Page, 2010 The unorthodox imagination in late medieval Britain explores how medieval people responded to images, stories, beliefs and practices which were at odds with the normative world view, from the heretical and subversive to the marvellous and exotic. The Neale lecture by Jean-Claude Schmitt examines why some unorthodox images were viewed as provocative and threatening and explores how successfully ecclesiastical authorities contained their impact The power of unorthodoxy to provoke wonder skepticism or disapproval provides an opportunity to view medieval culture from fresh perspectives The essays in this volume show that unorthodoxy was embedded in mainstream medieval culture from stories of fairies and witches which promoted orthodox moral values to the social conformity of practitioners of ritual magic This book provides a guide to understanding medieval unorthodoxy and the roles played by experience and imagination in medieval encounters with the unorthodox It will be essential reading for anyone interested in the exotic provocative and deviant in medieval culture

Kingdom of Snow Raymond Van Dam, 2002-09-27 Kingdom of Snow investigates the impact of Roman rule in Cappadocia and the fate of classical Greek culture in an increasingly Christian society

Affections of the Mind Emma Lipton, 2011-08-15 Affections of the Mind argues that a politicized negotiation of issues of authority in the institution of marriage can be found in late medieval England where an emergent middle class of society used a sacramental model of marriage to exploit contradictions within medieval theology and social hierarchy Emma Lipton traces the unprecedented popularity of marriage as a literary topic and the tensions between different models of marriage in the literature of the later fourteenth and fifteenth centuries by analyzing such texts as Chaucer's Franklin's Tale The Book of Margery Kempe and the N-Town plays Affections of the Mind focuses on marriage as a fluid and contested category rather than one with a fixed meaning and argues that the late medieval literature of sacramental marriage subverted aristocratic and clerical traditions of love and marriage in order to promote the values of the lay middle strata of society This book will be of value to a broad range of scholars in medieval studies

Medieval Sign Theory and Sir Gawain and the Green Knight Ross Gilbert Arthur, 1987 The formal theory of signs taught in fourteenth century schools and its analytic techniques were familiar to all educated Englishmen of the period whether directly from the standard texts or indirectly through their manifestations in sermons popularizing poetry and discussions of heraldic practice In this book Ross Arthur seeks to understand Sir Gawain and the Green Knight in terms of the poet's creative use of that theory

Law in Common Tom Johnson, 2020 Law in Common draws on a large body of unpublished archival material from local archives and libraries across the country to show how ordinary people in the later Middle Ages such as peasants craftsmen and townspeople used law in their everyday lives developing our understanding of the operation of late medieval society and politics
