Nutrition, Aging, and the Elderly D.E. Danford, H.N. Munro, 2013-11-11 The proportion of the population over 65 years of age is increasing steadily in most industrialized countries In the United States the proportion of elderly people has risen from four percent in 1900 to 11 % in 1978 and is projected to be 14% by the year 2000 The occurrence of debilitating chronic diseases in the elderly increases with each additional year These diseases along with the natural loss of tissue function that occurs throughout adult life impose a heavy burden on the health care system Nutrition plays an important etiologic role in many of these degenerative changes Consequently the aging segment of the population presents a challenge to the nutrition scientist who should be able to recommend optimal intakes of nutrients to minimize the functional losses associated with aging and to optimize the health of those already elderly This sixth volume in the series Human Nutrition A Comprehensive Treatise provides a conspectus of the various interactions of nutrition with the aging process and a comprehensive survey of current knowledge of the amounts of individual nutrients needed by the elderly The volume begins with a general survey of the multifaceted relationship of nutrition to aging followed by four chapters on how nutrition can affect age related changes in selected body functions The next six chapters cover the available evidence regarding the needs of the elderly for dietary energy protein calcium trace elements vitamins and fiber Reichel's Care of the Elderly Joseph J. Handbook of Clinical Nutrition and Aging Connie W. Bales, Christine S. Ritchie, 2003-10-01 A compendium of detailed strategies for using nutritional interventions to ameliorate a host of age related disorders and an evidence based review of what intervention are and are not effective These range from the effects of nutrition on the aging eye the sense of taste and smell hearing loss sarcopenia and dementia to the clinical role of nutrition in vascular and pulmonary disorders cancer immunity endocrine and alimentary tract disorders and renal and musculoskeletal disorders The authors present the physiological basis for each disorder provide the latest information about the interaction of nutrition with each condition and review the potential routes and mechanisms for clinical intervention All clinical chapters conclude with a summary of practical applications and treatment guidelines for secondary prevention management and therapy Handbook of Pain and Aging David I. Mostofsky, Jacob Lomranz, 2013-11-11 From time to time professional journals and edited volumes devote some of their pages to considerations of pain and aging as they occur among the aged in different cultures and populations One starts from several reasonable assumptions among them that aging per se is not a disease process yet the risk and frequency of disease processes increase with ongoing years The physical body s functioning and ability to restore all forms of damage and insult slow down the immune system becomes compromised and the slow growing pathologies reach their critical mass in the later years The psychological body also becomes weaker with unfulfilled promises and expectations and with tragedies that visit individuals and families and the prospect that whatever worlds remain to be conquered will most certainly not be met with success in the rapidly passing days and years that can only culminate in death Despair and depression coupled with infirmity and sensory and or motor inefficiency aggravate both the threshold and the tolerance for discomfort and synergistically collaborate to perpetuate a vicious cycle in which the one may mask the other Although the clinician is armed with the latest advances in medicine and phar macology significant improvement continues to elude her or him The geriatric specialist all too familiar with such realities usually can offer little else than a hortative to learn to live with it but the powers and effectiveness of learning itself have declined Aging, Nutrition and Taste Jacqueline B. Marcus, 2019-04-15 Approximately 380 million people worldwide are 60 years of age or older This number is predicted to triple to more than 1 billion by 2025 Aging Nutrition and Taste Nutrition Food Science and Culinary Perspectives for Aging Tastefully provides research facts theories practical advice and recipes with full color photographs to feed the rapidly growing aging population healthfully This book takes an integrated approach utilizing nutrition food science and the culinary arts A significant number of aging adults may have taste and smell or chemosensory disorders and many may also be considered to be undernourished While this can be partially attributed to the behavioral physical and social changes that come with aging the loss or decline in taste and smell may be at the root of other disorders Aging adults may not know that these disorders exist nor what can be done to compensate This text seeks to fill the knowledge gap Aging Nutrition and Taste Nutrition Food Science and Culinary Perspectives for Aging Tastefully examines aging from three perspectives nutritional changes that affect health and well being food science applications that address age specific chemosensory changes compromised disease states and health and culinary arts techniques that help make food more appealing to diminishing senses Beyond scientific theory readers will find practical tips and techniques products recipes and menus to increase the desirability consumption and gratification of healthy foods and beverages as people age Presents information on new research and theories including a fresh look at calcium cholesterol fibers omega 3 fatty acids higher protein requirements vitamins C E D trace minerals and phytonutrients and others specifically for the aging population Includes easy to access and usable definitions in each chapter guidelines recommendations tables and usable bytes of information for health professionals those who work with aging populations and aging people themselves Synthesizes overall insights in overviews introductions and digest summaries of each chapter identifying relevant material from other chapters and clarifying their pertinence
