Nutrition Womens Health:

Optimizing Women's Health through Nutrition Lilian U. Thompson, Wendy E. Ward, 2007-12-03 It is no surprise that women and men experience biological and physiological differences fundamentally and throughout the lifecycle What is surprising is that faced with such a self evident truth there should be so little consideration to date of how these differences affect susceptibility to disease and metabolic response to dietary treatment U

Women's Health in an Interdisciplinary Dimension - Determinants of Nutritional Disorders Karolina Krupa-Kotara, Patxi León Guereño, Izabella Uchmanowicz, Michał Czapla, 2024-10-10 The increase in the prevalence of diet related diseases in the female population since the second half of the 20th century is likely the result of increasing life expectancy combined with increased exposure to environmental factors including lifestyle To date the exact mechanism for the development of many nutrition related diseases remains unknown Mainly because of the multifactorial etiology It is often forgotten that human biology and pathophysiology are regulated at the level of gene expression Genetics loads the gun but the environment pulls the trigger by Judith Stern illustrates the complex relationship between diseases and environmental factors The analogy accurately conveys that disease phenotypes are not only the result of interactions between different genes but also between genes and environmental determinants

The Importance of Women's Status for Child Nutrition in Developing Countries Lisa C. Smith, 2003 Until recently the role of women's social status in determining their children's nutritional health went largely unnoticed That is until researchers began to ponder the Asian Enigma the question of why malnutrition is much more prevalent among children in South Asia than in Sub Saharan Africa even though South Asia surpasses Sub Saharan Africa in most of the principal determinants of child nutrition This report uses data from 36 countries in three developing regions to establish empirically that women's status defined as women's power relative to men's is an important determinant of children's nutritional status It finds that the pathways through which status influences child nutrition and the strength of that influence differ considerably from one region to another Where women's status is low this research proves unequivocally that policies to eradicate gender discrimination not only benefit women but also their children
