California Water Plan Update 2009: Strategic plan, 2009 Water Management in Petroleum Industries Somnath

Basu, Andrew R. Shaw, Mudumbai Venkatesh, 2025-08-03 This book provides a roadmap for sustainable development and growth of petroleum industry with respect to water usage and discharge Water and energy are intricately tied with each other As a major source of conventional energy petroleum industries upstream midstream and downstream are collectively large consumers of water Increasing water stress in major parts of the world has made the industry aware of the impact of usable water on different sectors of petroleum industry e g exploration and production refining and fuel processing Treatment of wastewater effluents to maximize reuse is becoming a primary objective of the industry This coupled with the need to minimize discharge of contaminants in the effluents that affect human and aquatic life and the environment at large at reasonable cost is emerging as an important consideration facing the petroleum industry for its sustainable development and growth in the future decades This book discusses in detail Sources of water consumed by petroleum production and processing and wastewater produced Health and environmental effects of chemicals contained in effluent streams Effluent treatment processes current and new innovations and technologies for reuse Water Markets for the 21st Century K.

William Easter, Qiuqiong Huang, 2014-07-30 This book evaluates the history the present and the future of water markets on 5 continents beginning with the institutional underpinnings of water markets and factors influencing transaction costs The book examines markets in seven countries and three different U S states ranging from village level water markets in Oman to basin wide formal water markets in Australia s Murray Darling River basin Introductory chapters on the background of water markets and on transaction costs and policy design are followed by chapter length discussion of water markets as an adaptive response to climate change and of supply reliability in a changing climate Case studies describe a variety of facets of the design and function of markets around the world California Chile Spain Oman Australia Canada India and China In analyzing these real world examples of markets the contributors explore water rights and trading of rights between agricultural and urban sectors and the principles and function of option markets They discuss different sized approaches from large scale ministry level administration of markets to informal arrangements among farmers in the same village or groups of villages which allocate water without large investment in management and infrastructure Discussion includes questions of why water market practices have not expanded more rapidly in arid places The book discusses mechanisms for resolving conflicts between water rights holders as well as between water right holders and third parties impacted by water trades and whether or not public ownership of water rights or use rights should trump private ownership and under what condition Also covered are new and expanding categories of water use beyond human consumption agriculture and industry to new technologies ranging from extracting natural gas from shale to producing biofuels The book concludes with suggestions for future water markets and offers a realistic picture of how they might change water use and distribution practices going forward

Preparing for California's Next Drought Jeanine Jones, 2000 California's Drought of 2007-2009 Jeanine Jones, 2010 Water Index Seth McDowell, 2017-10-01 In the wake of an escalating global crisis with water Water Index is the first critical inventory and analysis of innovative architecture landscape architecture and design solutions to address the rising disappearing and contamination of water As an ecological disaster complex ferments in contemporary architectural discourse design competition briefs conference topics and journal themes optimistically call for designers to reconcile or reimagine the relationship between water architecture and city Anxiety is elevated by the onslaught of extreme weather in the form of super storms hurricanes tsunamis landslides floods and droughts whose frequencies and intensities continue to increase Couple the ever present exposure to disaster with scientific data that suggests a future characterized by climate change and population growth and then we have the ingredients for a full fledged paranoia the perfect motivation for absurd expansive and radical building projects Water Index examines three hydrological tragedies flood contamination and drought through strategies that offer methods for controlling escaping or adapting to the vital natural resource Water Index is a collective vision of the future that provides solutions for every continent and spans the disciplines of urban design landscape architecture and architecture The book works to create an enduring manual and manifesto for water development and design in the twenty first century and to acknowledge crisis initiated design as an important trajectory for architectural discourse Water Index highlights a moment when designers have linked formal concerns with social ecological and political agendas offering solutions for expanding global problems

The Great Warming Brian Fagan, 2010-08-01 In this New York Times bestseller Brian Fagan shows how climate transformed and sometimes destroyed human societies during the earth s last global warming phase From the 10th to 15th centuries the earth experienced a rise in surface temperature that changed climate worldwide a preview of today's global warming In some areas including much of Western Europe longer summers brought bountiful crops and population growth that led to cultural flowering In others drought shook long established societies such as the Maya and the Indians of the American Southwest whose monumental buildings were left deserted as elaborate social structures collapsed Brian Fagan examines how subtle changes in the environment had far reaching effects on human life in a narrative that sweeps from the Arctic ice cap to the Sahara to the Indian Ocean The lessons of history suggest we may be yet be underestimating the power of climate change to disrupt our lives today

Managing for Healthy Ecosystems David J. Rapport, Bill L. Lasley, Dennis E. Rolston, N. Ole Nielsen, Calvin O. Qualset, Ardeshir B. Damania, 2002-10-29 One of the critical issues of our time is the dwindling capacity of the planet to provide life support for a large and growing human population Based on a symposium on ecosystem health Managing for Healthy Ecosystems identifies key issues that must be resolved if there is to be progress in this complex area such as Evolving methods for regional ecosystem health assessment employing complex adaptive systems coupled with adaptive technologies to permit accurate determination of changes in regional and global environments Issues and methods for assessing monitoring and managing diversity and its impact on human health in the context of climate change agroecosystems restoration of forests politics culture and tradition Leading thinkers in the field provide a coherent synthesis and a benchmark for the practice of this emerging field worldwide The more than 100 peer reviewed papers are grouped into three major parts The first Emerging Concepts explores the diverse meanings of ecosystem health within ecological socio economic and human health perspectives and the linkages to related concepts such as ecological integrity sustainable development and ecological footprints The second part Issues and Methods introduces methods for assessing and monitoring ecosystem health including strategies for gaining political and stakeholder input and support for science based ecosystem management The final part Case Studies reports experiences of interdisciplinary teams grappling with specific issues in a variety of aquatic and terrestrial ecosystems
