Timothy Walsh, 2017-07-12 Sponsored by the Adolescent Mental Health Initiative of the Annenberg Public Policy Center APPC of the University of Pennsylvania and the Annenberg Foundation Trust at Sunnylands Trust Treating and Preventing Adolescent Mental Health Disorders Second Edition provides a major update since the first edition in 2005 It addresses the current state of knowledge about the major mental health disorders that emerge during adolescence including updated DSM 5 diagnostic criteria Here six commissions established by the APPC and the Sunnylands Trust pool their expertise on adolescent anxiety schizophrenia substance use disorders depression and bipolar disorders eating disorders and suicidal behavior in sections that thoroughly define each disorder outline and assess available treatments discuss prevention strategies and suggest a research agenda based on what we know and don't yet know about these various conditions. Two additional behavioral disorders, gambling and internet addiction, are covered in this second edition. As a meaningful counterpoint to its primary focus on mental illness, the volume also incorporates the latest research from a seventh commission on positive youth development, which addresses how we can fully prepare young people to be happy and successful throughout their lives. Concluding chapters discuss overarching issues regarding the behavioral and mental health of adolescents, overcoming the stigma of mental illness, the research policy and practice context for the delivery of evidence-based treatments, and the development of a more robust agenda to advance adolescent health. Integrating the work of eminent scholars in both psychology and psychiatry, this work will be an essential volume for academics and practicing clinicians and will serve as a wake-up call to mental health professionals and policy makers alike about the state of our nation's response to the needs of adolescents with mental disorders.

Adolescent Suicide Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry. Committee on Adolescence, 1996. Even the most skilled therapist may underestimate suicide potential. Careful assessment and competent psychiatric intervention cannot always predict the suicidality of a particular person. Adolescent Suicide GAP Report 140 presents techniques that allow psychiatrists and all those caring for the health and welfare of adolescents to respond to signals of distress with timely therapeutic intervention. It also suggests measures of anticipatory prevention. Adolescent Suicide presents an overview of adolescent suicidal behavior. It explores risk factors, the identification and evaluation of the suicidal adolescent, and approaches to therapy. It offers both historical and cross-cultural perspectives, the relevance of suicide to adolescent development, mental health training needs regarding suicidality, and related issues such as public health policies and medicolegal concerns. The risk of suicide presents a unique crisis in adolescent development. For this reason, all mental health professionals will find this report an indispensable tool in the treatment of adolescents at risk for suicide. Drawing from years of combined experience, this committee has applied its expertise on adolescent development to the sobering problem of suicide.

The book, the very first to disseminate the findings of the Adolescent Mental Health Initiative sponsored by the Annenberg Foundation Trust at Sunnylands and the Annenberg Public Policy Center (APPC) of the University of Pennsylvania, addresses the current state of our knowledge about various mental health disorders in the teenage years, a developmental period when behavior and the brain are still plastic. Supporting Utah's Parents in Preventing Adolescent Suicide Jenni Whicker, 2012 Suicide a public health problem on a global scale has become the focus in many domains across the United States With the recent push to provide solutions to the adolescent suicide rate in the U S the school setting has become an important venue for prevention and intervention efforts While there are many risk and protective factors the majority of suicide completions are concurrent with psychiatric disorders among adolescents as such this is an area that warrants further investigation Additionally school resources are often overwhelmed by the magnitude of need among the student population therefore effective interventions must be identified that can feasibly be implemented in the schools Research has suggested that parent adolescent relationships are key in the prevention of suicide yet minimal research has been conducted towards promoting healthy parent adolescent relationships for at risk adolescents Additionally some research suggests that school and community interventions are only more effective than parental support when negative parent adolescent relationships are present This implies that fostering parental support should be a top priority in school based suicide prevention efforts This literature review identifies and summarizes pertinent scholarly research and resources for schools to better support parents of adolescents who struggle with suicidal thoughts and previous attempted suicides As part of an intervention plan which increases home school collaboration in adolescent suicide prevention handouts were developed for parents found in the appendix which include information on warning signs of suicide risk factors for suicide and methods of responding to suicidality After adapting these handouts to best meet their students needs school based mental health professionals may consider including these handouts in their school s crisis plan and suicide prevention efforts
