Guidelines for the Prevention and Control of Nosocomial Infections U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, 1981 Hospital Infection Prevention Chand Wattal, Nancy Khardori, 2013-10-30 The art of medicine becomes science when supported by evidence The recommended practices of infection prevention are based on scientific and epidemiologic evidence However most health care professionals see them as mandates and fail to incorporate them into their routine patient care activities

The core goal of this publication is to link the practices to the principles they are based on. The expectation is that understanding of the principles will change the practices from mandates to should do in the minds of health care professionals. This will lead to improvement in health care by preventing unintended harm to patients, co-workers, and the communities at large. At the same time, the text provides a comprehensive, thorough, and up-to-date information on all aspects of infection prevention in a reader-friendly manner and therefore will serve as a valuable reference.

Outbreak Investigation, Prevention, and Control in Health Care Settings: Critical Issues for Patient Safety, Second Edition

Kathleen Meehan Arias, 2010 Guidelines for Prevention and Control of Nosocomial Infections Julia S. Garner, Walter W.

Williams, 1983 Healthcare-Associated Infections in Children J. Chase McNeil, Judith R. Campbell, Jonathan D.

Crews, 2018-10-30

With advances in technology and medical science, children with previously untreatable and often fatal conditions such as congenital heart disease, extreme prematurity, and pediatric malignancy are living longer. While this is a tremendous achievement, pediatric providers are now more commonly facing challenges in these medical complex children both as a consequence of their underlying disease and the delivery of medical care. The term healthcare-associated infections (HAIs) encompasses both infections that occur in the hospital and those that occur as a consequence of healthcare exposure and medical complexity in the outpatient setting. HAIs are associated with substantial morbidity and mortality for the individual patient as well as seriously taxing the healthcare system as a whole. In studies from the early 2000s, over 11% of all children in pediatric intensive care units develop HAIs, and this figure increases substantially if neonatal intensive care units are considered. While progress has been made in decreasing the rates of HAI in the hospital, these infections remain a major burden on the medical system. In a study published in 2013, the annual estimated costs of the five most common HAIs in the United States totaled 9.8 billion. An estimated 648,000 patients developed HAIs in hospitals within the US in 2011, and children with healthcare-associated bloodstream infection have a greater than three-fold increased risk of death. While a number of texts discuss HAIs in the broader context of infectious diseases or pediatric infectious diseases such as Mandell's Principles and Practice of Infectious Diseases or Long and Pickering's Principles and Practice of Pediatric Infectious Diseases, no single text specifically focuses on the epidemiology, diagnosis, and management of HAI in children. Many infectious diseases texts are organized based on the microbiology of infection, and from this starting point, then discussing the clinical syndromes associated with the organism of interest. For instance, a chapter on Staphylococcus aureus may contain a brief discussion of the role of S. aureus in surgical site infections in the wider context of all staphylococcal disease. For clinicians caring for children at the bedside, however, the clinical syndrome is typically appreciated and intervention necessary prior to organism identification. We propose a text that details both the general principles involved in HAIs and infection prevention but also provides a problem-oriented approach. Such a text would be of interest to intensivists, neonatologists, hospitalists, oncologists, infection preventionists, and infectious diseases specialists. The proposed text will be divided into three principle sections 1 Basic Principles of Infection Control and Prevention 2 Major Infectious Syndromes and 3 Infections in Vulnerable Hosts Chapters in the Major Infectious Syndromes section will include discussion of the epidemiology microbiology clinical features diagnosis medical management or surgical management as appropriate and prevention of the disease entity of interest Chapters will seek to be evidenced based as much as possible drawing from the published medical literature as well as from clinical practice guidelines such as those from the Infectious Diseases Society of America when applicable We intend to include tables figures and algorithms as appropriate to assist clinicians in the evaluation and management of these often complex patients Finally we intend to invite authors to participate in this project from across a number of medical specialties including infectious diseases infection control critical care oncology and surgery to provide a multidisciplinary understanding of disease It is our intent to have many chapters be co written by individuals in different subspecialties for instance a chapter on ventilator associated pneumonia may be co written by both infectious disease and critical care medicine specialists Such a unique text has the potential to provide important guidance for clinicians caring for these often fragile children
