Remembering Women Christine Lehnen, 2025-06-19 Women do have a history of their own All we need to do is remember it In this illuminating new investigation Christine Lehnen looks back at our collective memory to explore the myriad ways that women in the past have enjoyed a more egalitarian life Due to advances in bioarchaeological methods scientists have discovered that one out of three women in Ancient Scythia was an active warrior buried with her weapons Far from being confined to their homes these women rode out to hunt travelled to distance places or used weapons to fend off their enemies These warriors were no exceptions to the rule with women enjoying a significantly higher degree of equality than their Greek contemporaries Remembering Women argues that there is a historical precedent for a fairer society From reappraisals of well known objects such as the earliest human bone calendars from the Stone Age to revelatory findings of innovative bioarchaeological methods used on human remains from Ancient Scythia evidence is accumulating that there were places in the past where all women were allowed to thrive Interweaving new findings from archaeology with the stories of her mother and grandmothers as well as her everyday experiences as a woman living today Lehnen explores our collective memory of women and argues that it needs to change if we are to create an egalitarian society Remembering Women follows the traces left in the material literary and archaeological record by our foremothers and their heirlooms artwork and stories to take a fresh look at our life in the present

Knowledge and Memory: the Real Story Robert S. Wyer, Jr., 2014-01-02

Narrative forms of mental representation and their influence on comprehension communication and judgment have rapidly become one of the main foci of research and theory in not only psychology but also other disciplines including linguistics sociology and anthropology No one has been more responsible for the awakening of interest in this area than Roger Schank and Bob Abelson In their target article they argue that narrative forms of mental representation or stories are the basic ingredients of social knowledge that play a fundamental role in the comprehension of information conveyed in a social context the storage of this information in memory and the later communication of it to others After explicating the cognitive processes that underlie the construction of narratives and their use in comprehension memory and communication the chapter authors consider the influence of stories on a number of more specific phenomena including political judgment marital relations and memory distortions that underlie errors in eyewitness testimony The provocativeness of the target chapter is matched by that of the companion articles each of which not only provides an important commentary on Schank and Abelson's conceptualization but also makes an important contribution to knowledge in its own right. The diversity of perspectives reflected in these articles whose authors include researchers in linguistics, memory and comprehension, social inference, cognitive development, social judgment, close relationships and social ecology testifies to the breadth of theoretical and empirical issues to which the target chapter is potentially relevant. This volume is a timely and important contribution to research and theory not only in social cognition but in many other areas as well. Canadian Books in Print, 1989
