Writing disenchantment Andrew Frayn, 2015-11-01 It has become axiomatic that First World War literature was disenchanted or disillusioned and returning combatants were unable to process or communicate that experience In Writing disenchantment Andrew Frayn argues that this was not just about the war non combatants were just as disenchanted as those who fought and writers such as D H Lawrence and Virginia Woolf produced some of the sharpest criticisms Its language already existed in contemporary sociological and historical accounts of the problems of mass culture and the modern city whose structures contained the conflict and were strengthened during it Archival material sales data and reviews are used to chart disenchantment in a wide range of early twentieth century war literature from novels about fears of invasion and pacifism through the modernist novels of the 1920s to its dominance in the War Books Boom of 1928-30 This book will appeal to scholars and students of English literature social and cultural history and gender studies

Handbook of British Literature and Culture of the First World War Ralf Schneider, Jane Potter, 2021-09-20 The First World War has given rise to a multifaceted cultural production like no other historical event This handbook surveys British literature and film about the war from 1914 until today The continuing interest in World War I highlights the interdependence of war experience the imaginative re-creation of that experience in writing and individual as well as collective memory In the first part of the handbook the major genres of war writing and film are addressed including of course poetry and the novel but also the short story furthermore it is shown how our conception of the Great War is broadened when looked at from the perspective of gender studies and post colonial criticism The chapters in the second part present close readings of important contributions to the literary and filmic representation of World War I in Great Britain All in all the contributions demonstrate how the opposing forces of focusing and canon formation on the one hand and broadening and revision of the canon on the other have characterised British literature and culture of the First World War

Great War Modernism Nanette Norris, 2015-12-16 New Modernist Studies while reviving and revitalizing modernist studies through lively scholarly debate about historicity aesthetics politics and genres is struggling with important questions concerning the delineation that makes discussion fruitful and possible This volume aims to explore and clarify the position of the so called core of literary modernism in its seminal engagement with the Great War In studying the years of the Great War we find ourselves once more studying the giants about whom there is so much more to say as well as adding hitherto marginalized writers and a few visual artists to the canon The contention here is that these war years were seminal to the development of a distinguishable literary practice which is called modernism but perhaps could be further delineated as Great War modernism a practice whose aesthetic merits can be addressed through formal analysis This collection of essays offers new insight into canonical British American European modernism of the Great War period using the critical tools of contemporary expansionist modernist studies By focusing on war and on the experience of the soldier and of those dealing with issues of war and survival these studies link the unique forms of expression found in modernism with the fragmented violent and traumatic experience of the time
