Biography, French, the study of a person's life, from birth to death, usually written by a biographer. The word is derived from the Greek bios (life) and grapho (to write). The first biographies were written by ancient Greek and Roman writers. The modern biography is a more detailed and systematic account of a person's life, often based on research and the use of primary sources. It can cover a wide range of subjects, from the lives of kings and queens to those of ordinary people. The biography is a popular form of literature, and many famous biographies have been written. The biography is also an important part of history, as it helps us to understand the lives of the people who have shaped the world.

Architecture, the art or science of designing and constructing buildings and other structures. It is a branch of the visual arts, and it involves the use of materials and techniques to create a functional and aesthetically pleasing environment. The word is derived from the Greek arche (beginning) and tekton (builder). The history of architecture is long and varied, with different styles and techniques developing in different parts of the world. The architecture of ancient civilizations, such as the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans, has been studied and admired for centuries. The architecture of the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, and the Baroque period are also important. The architecture of the modern world is a reflection of the social and cultural changes of the time. The architecture of the future will be a reflection of the challenges and opportunities of the 21st century.
