A treatment model that was once seen as different, strange or even alien is now commonplace. In fact many people have allied themselves with CT claiming that they have always done CT. Even my psychoanalytic colleagues have claimed that they often use CT. After all they say Psychoanalysis is a cognitive therapy. Cognitive Therapy or Cognitive Psychotherapy has become a kaleidoscope model of treatment with influences coming from many sources. Some of these contributory streams have been information processing behavior therapy, Constructivist psychology and dynamic psychotherapy. Each of these sources have added color shading and depth to the CT model. What was originally uni-dimensional in terms of the CT focus on depression has become multidimensional as the CT model has been applied to virtually every patient population, treatment setting and therapy context. CT must now be seen as a general model of psychotherapy that with modifications can be applied to the broad range of clinical problems and syndromes. What has tied these various applications of CT together is the emphasis on a strong grounding in cognitive theory, a commitment to empirical support and a dedication to broadening the model.
