Nurturing Development Aid And Cooperation In Todays Changing World:

Development Cooperation and Emerging Powers Sachin Chaturvedi, Thomas Fues, Elizabeth Sidiropoulos, 2012-05-10 The current framework of development cooperation is dominated by the experiences of industrialized countries But emerging economies have begun to accelerate their own development programmes and attempts to bring them into existing aid models have been met with caution and reservation This expert topical volume explores the development policies of Brazil China India Mexico and South Africa analysing how South South cooperation has evolved and where it differs from traditional development cooperation This vital new collection brings together first hand experience from these countries to provide a forward looking analysis of the current global architecture of development cooperation and of the possible convergence of traditional and emerging development actors

Nurturing Development and Social Transformation in International Politics Ismail Serageldin, 1995

The World Bank David Williams, 2012-08-21 In the 1990s the World Bank changed its policy to take the position that the problems of poverty and governance are inextricably linked and improving the governance of its borrower countries became increasingly accepted as a legitimate and important part of the World Bank s development activities This book examines why the World Bank came to see good governance as important and evaluate what the World Bank is doing to improve the governance of its borrower countries David Williams examines changing World Bank policy since the late 1970s to show how a concern with good governance grew out of the problems the World Bank was experiencing with structural adjustment lending particularly in Sub Saharan Africa The book provides an account of the early years of the World Bank and traces the increasing acceptance of the idea of good governance within the Bank through the 1990s while systematically relating the policies of good governance to liberalism The author provides a detailed case study of World Bank lending to Ghana to demonstrate what the attempt to improve governance looks like in practice Williams assesses whether the World Bank has been successful in its attempts to improve governance and draws out some of the implications of the argument for how we should think about sovereignty for how we should understand the connections between liberalism and international politics This book will be of interest to students and scholars of international relations politics economics development and African studies

Palestinian State Formation Nubar Hovsepian, 2009-03-26 This book examines the role of education in building a new Palestinian state and especially on the role and function of the education system in the process of state formation Since education frames a people's identity the nature of the education system affects how Palestinians relate to their state Through education the Palestinian Authority PA transforms the parameters of identity to serve the requirements of state building and the peace process International assistance to the PA affects all of these processes through the disbursement of political rent whose primary function is to bolster the PA and to keep the peace process going The new Palestinian Authority has assumed two seemingly contradictory functions state building and resistance and the dynamic tensions between the two raise key questions for political and policy analysis Are these functions mutually exclusive or complementary in the context of the ongoing peace negotiations and state building Can the Palestinian leadership transform the Palestinian national movement from a revolutionary organization to a pragmatic state apparatus Are the PLO and the PA interchangeable What type of power does the PA need to cultivate the support or to secure the compliance of the Palestinian people for the state building project Clearly the answers to these questions have a direct bearing on the education system Will this system promote a resistance identity or a state building legitimizing identity
