Nutrition and Physical Activity Nicole Wolfram,Michael Rigby,Michael Sjöström,Rosa G. Frazzica,Wilhelm Kirch,2008-09-23 One important reason for the multitude of research activities in this field is because physical inactivity and nutrition are significant risk factors for many common non communicable diseases During the past decades physical inactivity and high dietary fat intakes have become increasingly prevalent in people s daily lives in industrialised countries To prevent and to tackle these major diseases there is a need for a much better understanding of the basic biological and underlying patho physiological processes as well as more relevant baseline data describing food intakes and physical activity habits amongst the general population Being aware of the importance of nutrition and physical activity for health status a multitude of projects with different scopes and methodologies has arisen This variety makes it necessary to bring the results of these activities into a coordinated framework

Philosophical Issues in Sport Science Emily Ryall,2020-02-18 The role and value of science within sport increases with ever greater professionalization and commercialization Scientific and technological innovations are devised to increase performance ensure greater accuracy of measurement and officiating reduce risks of harm enhance spectatorship and raise revenues However such innovations inevitably come up against epistemological and metaphysical problems related to the nature of sport and physical competition This Special Issue identifies and explores key and contemporary philosophical issues in relation to the science of sport and exercise It is divided into three sections 1 Scientific evidence causation and sport 2 Science technology and sport officiating and 3 Scientific influences on the construction of sport It brings together scholars working on philosophical problems in sport to examine issues related to the values and assumptions behind sport and exercise science and key problems resulting from these and to provide recommendations for improving its practice

Capabilities assessment to support food systems transformation towards sustainable healthy diets in Ethiopia Namugumya, Brenda S.,Mengesha, Belay Terefe,Pittore, Katherine,Herens, Marion,2025-02-28 Collaborative governance processes are increasingly recognized as critical for normative food systems transformation FST globally For instance collective action and multistakeholder partnerships is one of the main levers of change stated in Ethiopia's Food Systems Roadmap. The collaborative processes bring together government, private actors and citizens in collective forums and networks to engage in long-term goal-oriented decision making and implementation. Ansell and Gash (2008) for example, change towards sustainable healthy diets and better planetary health for all populations. Forming and maintaining collaborative governance processes entail navigating different challenges attributed to the inherently dynamic nature of such partnerships.
