

PREVENTING WORKPLACE STRESS

Warning signs

According to NIOSH, early warning signs of job stress include headaches, sleep disturbances, difficulty concentrating, short temper, upset stomach, job dissatisfaction, and low morale. Job stress can lead to cardiovascular disease, musculoskeletal disorders, psychological disorders, workplace injury, and possibly suicide, cancer, ulcers, and impaired immune function.

The first signs of job stress can come through low morale, health and job complaints, and employee turnover. But there may not be obvious signs if workers are worried about losing their jobs.

Identify the problem

To determine the scope and cause of a suspected stress problem in the organization, hold group discussions among managers, labor representatives, and employees. In a small company, these discussions may provide all the information you need to locate and deal with stress issues. But in a larger organization, use the discussions to help put together surveys to gather more information about stressful job conditions.

Information should be obtained about how employees perceive their job conditions and levels of stress, health, and satisfaction. Also examine objective measures such as absenteeism, illness and turnover rates, or performance problems to gauge the presence and scope of work stress. Summarize and analyze data from discussions, surveys, and other sources to home in on the location of a stress problem and job conditions that may have led to it. Are these problems widespread throughout the organization or only found in a single department or specific jobs?

Design and implement interventions

For smaller organizations, the informal discussions that helped identify stress issues may also provide prevention ideas. A more formal process may be necessary in larger organizations, where a team is asked to develop recommendations after analyzing the data from Step 1 and consulting with outside experts. The team should do the following:

- Target the source of stress for change
- Propose and prioritize intervention strategies
- Communicate planned interventions to employees
- Implement interventions

Evaluate the interventions

Establish time frames for evaluating interventions. Those that involve organizational change should receive both short- and long-term scrutiny. Short-term evaluations could be done quarterly to provide early indications of program effectiveness or the need to change direction. Many interventions produce initial effects that do not last. Long-term evaluations are often done annually and can determine whether interventions have lasting effects.

Focus evaluations on the same types of information collected during the problem identification phase of the intervention, including information from employees about working conditions, levels of perceived stress, health problems, and satisfaction.

Job stress prevention doesn't end with evaluation, according to NIOSH. Job stress prevention should be seen as a continuous process that uses evaluation data to refine or redirect the intervention strategy.
