INTEGRATED MANAGEMENT OF PREGNANCY AND CHILDBIRTH (IMPAC)

The standard

All women, from the moment they begin trying to conceive until 12 weeks of gestation, should take a folic acid supplement. Women who have had a fetus diagnosed as affected by a neural tube defect (NTD) or have given birth to a baby with NTD should receive information on the risk of recurrence, be advised on the protective effect of periconceptional<sup>1</sup> folate supplementation and be offered high-dose supplementation.

Aim

To prevent NTDs and other congenital malformations in the fetus.

Requirements

- ☐ A national policy and locally adapted guidelines on folic acid supplementation are available and are correctly implemented.
- ☐ Health providers are competent in the following areas: the risk of folic acid deficiency; the benefits of folic acid supplementation before conception and during early pregnancy; correct supplement dosages; and the importance of advising pregnant women to take folic acid before conception and during the first trimester of pregnancy.
- ☐ Folic acid is available and affordable to women.
- ☐ A method to record the preventive treatment provided is in place.
- ☐ Health education activities are conducted to raise the awareness of women and of the community on the importance of taking folic acid supplements in the periconceptional period.

Applying the standard

Health providers in antenatal and family planning clinics must:

- Advise women trying to conceive to take a dose of 400 µg folic acid daily, starting two months before the planned pregnancy.
- Advise women who have not been supplementing their diet and who suspect themselves to be pregnant to begin taking 400 µg folic acid daily and to continue until they are 12 weeks pregnant.
- Counsel pregnant women who have previously had a baby with NTD or who have diabetes or who are under anticonvulsant treatment about the increased risk of a future baby being affected, and advise them to take 5 mg folic acid daily and increase their food intake of folate.
- Record the treatment given in the maternal card.
- Record cases of NTD, in accordance with local guidelines, in the logbook and in the woman's record.

Prevention Of Neural Tube Defects:

Prevention of Spina Bifida and Other Neural Tube Defects John Dobbing, 1983 Tube defect prevention in high incidence areas and epidemiological evidence concerning the cause of neural tube defects Two additional topics appended to the text discuss a regional study of maternal diet and nutrition during early pregnancy and following delivery and the economic aspects associated with neural tube defect prevention Tabular and graphical presentations of data and literature citations are provided throughout the text

Folic Acid Supplementation for the Prevention of Neural Tube Defects Tracy A. Wolff, Catherine Takacs Witkop, Therese Miller, Shamsuzzoha B. Syed, U.S. Preventive Services Task Force, 2009

BACKGROUND Neural tube defects NTDs are among the most common birth defects in the United States

PURPOSE To update the evidence on folic acid supplementation in women of childbearing age for the prevention of neural tube defects in their offspring

DATA SOURCES MEDLINE and Cochrane Library searches from January 1995 through November 2007 recent systematic reviews reference lists of retrieved articles and expert suggestions

STUDY SELECTION English language studies were selected to answer the following two questions Does folic acid supplementation in women of childbearing age reduce the risk of a pregnancy affected by a neural tube defect Does folic acid supplementation in women of childbearing age increase the risk of any harmful outcomes for either the woman or the infant The following study types were selected for potential benefits of folic acid randomized controlled trials RCTs case control studies cohort studies systematic reviews and meta analyses for potential harms of folic acid RCTs case control studies systematic reviews meta analyses and large observational studies

DATA EXTRACTION All studies were reviewed abstracted and rated for quality using predefined U S Preventive Services Task Force criteria

DATA SYNTHESIS Four observational studies reported benefit in reduction of risk of NTD associated with folic acid containing supplements Differences in study type and methods prevent the calculation of a summary of the reduction in risk The one included study on harms reported that the association of twinning with folic acid intake disappeared after adjusting for in vitro fertilization and for underreporting of folic acid intake

LIMITATIONS There is limited evidence on dose We found no evidence on the potential harm of masking vitamin B12 deficiency in women of childbearing age Our search focused on NTDs and therefore does not provide a comprehensive review of the effects of folic acid on all possible outcomes

CONCLUSIONS New observational evidence supports previous RCT evidence that folic acid containing supplements reduce the risk of NTD affected pregnancies The association of folic acid use with twin gestation may be confounded by fertility interventions including ovulation stimulation and in vitro fertilization

system caused by partial or complete failure of the neural tube to close within 28 days of conception They represent the second most frequent cause of congenital abnormality In this book the authors discuss the prevalence pathogenesis and prevention of neural tube defects Topics include preconception folic acid as a primary prevention tool for NTD and its risk assessment understanding and preventing folic acid resistant neural tube defects knowledge of the cellular mechanisms responsible for normal neural tube formation in comprehending and preventing NTDs developmental delay in interneuron motor neuron sensory tract and synapse formation in chick spina bifida and an examination of whether neural tube defects lead to structural alterations in the urinary and genital organs in human fetuses Prevention of Neural Tube Defects
