Gaining Voice Christopher J. Clark,2019-02-25 Scholars studying the causes and consequences of political representation particularly in terms of gender and race often turn to a concept called descriptive representation Descriptive representation tells us the degree to which elected officials resemble their constituents and whether such a resemblance has a bearing on the way they legislate In other words do people vote for candidates of their same racial ethnic background or gender If they do does this affect the type of policies an elected official pursues Further if citizens see people who look like them in office does it have an effect on their political attitudes and participation In this book Christopher J Clark argues that descriptive representation is a more multifaceted phenomenon than previously shown particularly when observed at the state level He contends that black political involvement political attitudes and public opinion are contingent on more than being represented by a single black elected official Rather they hinge on the proportion of African Americans making up a state legislature what Clark terms black seat share as well as the degree to which that proportion reflects the demographic makeup of the state As well Clark pinpoints

the critical mass of African American legislators necessary to initiate the creation of black caucuses an important institution for minority representation Clark bases his study on an examination of black representation in state legislatures between 1966 and 2010 looking particularly at black political opinion and involvement in the development of welfare and education policy
