Introduction

The three primary categories of articles solicited and published by INNOVAR are Research Articles, Reflection Articles, and Review Articles (as per this journal's "Guidelines for Contributing Authors"). The present piece would fall under the reflection-article category. However, its scope and intent are broader than those implied in INNOVAR's guidelines for this type of article – namely, that reflection articles “present the results of research from an author's original source-based, analytical, interpretative, or critical perspective on a specific topic.” Although my research stream over the last quarter century has focused on the topic of customer service, and while this article will allude to some key insights from that research stream, it is likely to be somewhat different from typical reflection articles appearing in this journal. The article's primary objectives are to (a) provide a critical analysis of my thirty-six year academic career; (b) discuss the personal lessons my career has taught me; and (c) draw on those lessons to offer suggestions to graduate students, researchers and other professionals for making significant contributions to their respective fields.

As a backdrop to what is to follow, I begin with a brief overview of my education and employment history. I obtained a Bachelor of Technology degree (in mechanical engineering) in 1970 from the Indian Institute of Technology-Madras and a Master of Business Administration degree (with a marketing concentration) in 1972 from the Indian Institute of Management-Ahmedabad. Among the various business fields to which I was introduced during the first year of my MBA program, I was most fascinated by

The Role of Reflection in Managerial Learning Marilyn W. Daudelin, Kent W. Seibert, 1999-09-30 Challenging work experiences are the richest source of learning for today's managers Yet lessons embedded in these experiences are not always obvious This comprehensive book describes a critical yet under researched element of how managers learn from these experiences reflection Today's workplace demands continual learning which in turn requires reflection While this book supports the prevailing view that reflection is central to experiential learning it challenges the traditional views that it is the same as contemplation that it is incompatible with management and that it is time consuming and unnatural for managers Original quantitative and qualitative research reported in this book indicates that two different yet complementary modes of managerial reflection exist active and proactive Active reflection is something that managers naturally engage in during challenging job experiences whereas managers must be prompted to engage in proactive reflection Both modes involve processes of intentional inquiry Different forces are necessary to stimulate each type of reflection Based on these findings the claim is made that the potential to learn from experience is greatest when managers intentionally engage in both modes Accordingly a holistic model that integrates active and proactive reflection is presented This model has important implications for theorists and researchers of managerial learning by identifying previously unreported aspects of reflection It is also relevant to practitioners and companies who desire to enhance what their managers learn from their workplace experience

Career Development as a Partner in Nation Building Australia Wendy Patton, 2019-07-15 Despite examples of vocational guidance practice being evident in Australia since the mid 1800s there remains a spasmodic and patchwork approach to practice across the country For decades it is a field which has been paradoxically boosted and challenged by changing economic and political agendas Repeated international national and State reviews emphasise the vital nature of a systemic national approach to career development however authors repeatedly lament the lack of a sustained focus on career activity as a major national priority There is no broad comprehensive historical reckoning of the history of career development theory and practice in Australia since this early period Career development theory and practice in Australia has been forged in partnership with developments in an international context In documenting the shared history with other countries the author significantly adds to the body of knowledge on career development as a field in Australia and internationally The book provides new understandings about the historical development of this field of knowledge and in particular the challenging and cyclical nature of its policy history
