Myths about Women's Rights Feryal M. Cherif, 2015-06-01 Two conventional wisdoms dominate debates about why women's rights advance in some places but not others While culture and religion are understood to be the primary barriers to gender equality efforts by international institutions and women's groups to change social norms are often seen as the most effective way to reduce discrimination This book introduces a third often overlooked explanation the core rights framework to account for how where and why women's rights advance It argues that female labor force participation and education serve as building blocks or core rights for the advancement of other women's rights Cultivating core rights is believed to spur group consciousness ease collective action problems and render women in a politically relevant group thereby increasing the prospects that women's rights are represented in the polity In examining the advancement of women's rights across four major areas political nationality reproductive and property rights this book shows that the conventional wisdom about the role of international norms and culture is usually overstated and often incomplete It also presents systematic evidence evaluating the effectiveness of different prescriptions for improving women's lives across a broad range of rights

decision-making and labor supply in Egypt El-Enbaby, Hoda,Gilligan, Daniel,Karachiwalla, Naureen,Kassim, Yumna,Kurdi, Sikandra,2019-12-23 Women s control over decision making within their family particularly regarding the use of household income can play an important and long lasting role in shaping their well being and that of their children Cash transfer programs often target women in order to increase their control over household resources Empirical evidence on the effectiveness of this approach is mixed and suggests the importance of local context We present evidence on the effect of cash transfers on women s control over decision making in the MENA region where little evidence is available and where cultural norms around women s roles differ from more studied regions Using a regression discontinuity approach we identify the impact of Egypt s Takaful national cash transfer program on women s control over decision making and labor supply Receiving cash transfers mostly reduced women s reported ability to influence household decisions particularly regarding child healthcare The loss of control over decision making was greater for women with less than primary education Other effects of the program include a decline in women s employment and an increase in men s involvement in spheres of decision making usually controlled by women These results are robust to changes in model specification We present suggestive evidence from mediation analysis that the negative effects on women s control over decision making was directly related to these declines in employment and increase in men s involvement in female spheres The negative findings are not wholly supported by complementary qualitative work in which women reported more positive perceptions of the program s impacts
