

Ornement n'est pas crime

Jean-Loup Pivin

Words of reason do not suffice to fully translate an intuition of the mind.

All cities have become international. All production, be it artistic, architectural, literary, industrial or economic, is instantly registered within the world, even though the images of objects and architecture don't always cross the borders of their city or country. Yet the place, the cultural land and heritage of the production and those who inspire it, turn one message into another and can create misunderstandings. The great misunderstanding of a world in creation and transformation giving people a vision that they can each interpret according to their culture and background. Of all these misunderstandings, one of the seemingly most derisory is the question of embellishment.

Foreigners can recognise elements of old Moroccan heritage but find it hard to accept today's interpretations. Yet modern Moroccan cities contain the same accumulated traces of Morocco's formal history in their suburbs and city-centres, their self-built houses and fancy villas. All the way down to the most underprivileged dwellings, the heavy décor is so omnipresent it can make you think all sense of criticism has been lost. The decoration that adorns bourgeois villas could even appear to be a mere unseemly ostentation in a country of visible poverty. >>>

pleinement une intuition de pensée.*

Toute ville est devenue internationale, toute production qu'elle soit artistique, architecturale, littéraire, industrielle et économique s'inscrit immédiatement dans le monde, même si les images de ces objets et de ces architectures ne franchissent pas toutes, les frontières de leur ville ou de leur pays. Pourtant il y a toujours le lieu, le terrain culturel et patrimonial de la production et de leurs inspirateurs qui transforment un message en un autre et peuvent créer le malentendu. Ce grand malentendu d'un monde qui se transforme et se crée donnant à voir à chacun, ce que chacun selon sa culture et sa formation peut interpréter à son sens. Parmi ces malentendus, l'un de ceux qui pourrait sembler des plus dérisoires, concerne l'ornement.

Ce que l'étranger peut reconnaître au patrimoine marocain d'hier, il en accepte mal les interprétations d'aujourd'hui. Pourtant la ville marocaine moderne fait couler dans ses banlieues et ses centres villes, dans ses maisons autoconstruites et ses villas de maître les mêmes traces d'accumulation de son histoire formelle. Jusque dans les habitations des plus démunies, le décor est omniprésent dans une surcharge qui peut faire penser à la perte de tout sens critique. Dans les villas bourgeoises, le décor pourrait faire croire à une simple ostentation inconvenante dans un pays à la misère présente. >>>
