The Making of the Modern Supermarket Bridget Salmon, Andrew Godley, 2025-06-04 The Making of the Modern Supermarket describes the emergence and growth of the modern supermarket format in Britain showing how the original American innovation of self service was adapted to the different postwar British context in a number of ways During the early 1960s various retailers began to experiment with larger formats which became known as supermarkets Sainsbury's was a late mover into self service but began to develop a different supermarket model emphasising fresh foods and perishable goods This led it to pursue a more expensive path of development as it invested in self service creating its novel supermarket format by the end of the 1960s The book explores in detail how this Sainsbury's format evolved It was driven by the company's historic commitment to selling fresh meat and other perishable goods which demanded a much greater commitment to refrigeration in Sainsbury's self service format than was the case for its peers Because most consumers were suspicious of buying fresh meat and perishables through self service outlets in the early 1960s Sainsbury's also had to retain high levels of staffing to support their self service offering During the 1960s as they extended their product range they facilitated the development of one stop shopping in the UK where customers were able to buy all their food requirements in one shop rather than shopping around This became the most popular version of the supermarket format and it was the template that others copied as they tried to follow Sainsbury's example *Retailing : critical concepts. 3,1. Stephanie Zarach, 1987-06-18 Imperial Wine Jennifer Regan-Lefebvre, 2024-04-23 A fascinating and approachable deep dive into the colonial roots of the global wine industry Imperial Wine is a bold rigorous history of Britain's surprising role in creating the wine industries of Australia South Africa and New Zealand Here historian Jennifer Regan Lefebvre bridges the genres of global commodity history and imperial history presenting provocative new research in an accessible narrative This is the first book to argue that today's global wine industry exists as a result of settler colonialism and that imperialism was central not incidental to viticulture in the British colonies Wineries were established almost immediately after the colonization of South Africa Australia and New Zealand as part of a civilizing mission tidy vines heavy with fruit were symbolic of Britain's subordination of foreign lands Economically and culturally nineteenth century settler winemakers saw the British market as paramount However British drinkers were apathetic towards what they pejoratively called colonial wine The tables only began to turn after the First World War when colonial wines were marketed as cheap and patriotic and started to find their niche among middle and working class British drinkers This trend combined with social and cultural shifts after the Second World War laid the foundation for the New World revolution in the 1980s making Britain into a confirmed country of wine drinkers and a massive market for New World wines These New World producers may have only received critical acclaim in the late twentieth century but Imperial Wine shows that they had spent centuries wooing and indeed manufacturing a British market for inexpensive colonial wines This book is sure to satisfy any curious reader who savors the complex stories behind this commodity chain
