The closest relation I had to marriage agreements for an example. There are different agreements that can be included in the marriage contract. They are: Marriage Agreements, Prenuptial Agreements, Separation Agreements and Divorce Settlement Agreements. The word agreement implies that both parties have voluntarily agreed.

Prenuptial Agreements: The contract is made before the couple enters into an agreement before marriage (before wedding). This agreement includes the property and assets of each spouse during marriage, the property and assets acquired by the spouse during the marriage, without financial distress or property involvement in the event of divorce.

Prenuptial Agreement: This is an agreement made about marriage, for marriage that the couple entered by law. This division of property and assets, and what plans for the future of divorce. The marriage should be entered by law, as the law requires that the right to divide the property and assets during divorce.

Separation Agreements: The agreement where both the spouses agreed to live separately but apart in a separation agreement. This agreement includes the child custody, maintenance of the child and what the spouse, sharing the cost of separation of spouse, they have to handle the child support, child custody and sharing of costs, including and divorce.

Separation of maintenance agreement: This is an Agreement where both the spouses agree to get out of the marriage. Both the spouses should agree that they must get separated for the agreement without the involvement of the court. This agreement is also called a financial maintenance agreement. This includes the property, assets, maintenance of spouse, child custody and separation/maintenance without the involvement of the court.

These agreements are generally the entered by any civil agreement. These agreements cannot challenge in the court. The court may decide the case when the court can judge that the agreement is not valid. If these agreements are not valid or otherwise, the court has the authority to make a decision on the agreement.
