

Literature, Ideology and Marxism

Historical Concept of Literature

- The modern concept of literature is an eighteenth century creation – developed further in the nineteenth century
- In the eighteenth century, literature was primarily a generalized social concept, expressing a certain level of educational achievement
- Originated from the Latin word littera, associated with the adjective literacy – the reading ability and experience
- Importance of great work due to concrete achievements
- The process and the result of formal composition within the social and formal properties of a language
- A category of use and condition rather than of production
- A particular specialization made in terms of social class, a definition of 'polite' and 'humane' learning and thus specified a particular social distinction.
- Gradually became an objective category of printed books of a certain quality

A Shift to Bourgeoise Category

- A shift from 'learning' to 'taste' or sensibility – categories of social condition
