Nutrition And The Surgical Patient Clinical Surgery International:

Nutrition and the Surgical Patient Graham L. Hill, 1981 Clinical Surgery International, 1986 A Handbook of Parenteral Nutrition H. A. Lee, G. Venkat Raman, 2013-11-11 Total parenteral nutrition TPN is now an everyday occurrence in most general hospitals Over the last two decades this therapeutic modality has been made so simple that it is no longer the province of the specialized surgeon or physician Indeed as with the management of chronic renal failure so now with short bowel disease home parenteral nutrition has become a reality though this still requires a specialist team dedicated to its management Furthermore as more patients will become suitable for home TPN treatment either long term or short term so better rationalization of a cost b delivery systems and c patient training will be necessary Lessons can be learnt from the somewhat diverse development of regular dialysis treatment in the early 1960s compared with the situation today Here is a golden opportunity with the UK National Registry to rationalize on home TPN costs and to make sure the treatment is simplified and available to all those who may require this treatment This book is not designed to be an overall comprehensive review of parenteral nutrition It is meant to set out simple guidelines and the requirements for effective TPN both in hospital and at home It is aimed at doctors in training interested physicians and surgeons nurses dietitians and pharmacists The purpose is to stimulate interest and awareness rather than to provide detailed small print information For the person seeking greater knowledge there are several excellent monographs on the subject Advances in Clinical Nutrition I.D.A. Johnston, 2012-12-06 The advent of any new and effective therapy is soon followed by large numbers of publications in which the indications and benefits are explored critically It is not unexpected therefore that within five years of the first Bermuda Symposium on advances in parenteral nutrition that a second Symposium was considered appropriate to review progress and explore new areas of investigation as well as enlarging the scope of the meeting to include enteral nutrition The rate of progress can be judged by the number of subjects which were not discussed at the first Symposium For example home parenteral nutrition computer assisted assessment and prescribing Studies of body protein synthesis and breakdown and the role of branched chain amino acids are all new subjects for this Symposium which were not covered at all in the first meeting Much progress has also been made to our understanding of the biochemical complications of parenteral nutrition and the problems related to long term access to the circulation Nutritional care has become safer and more effective There is an increasing awareness of the difficulties in making a true nutritional assessment in selecting patients for total parenteral nutrition and more attention has also been focussed on different approaches to enteral support in the management of undernourished patients There is also continuing debate on the cost effectiveness of this expensive method of treatment and critics look in vain for evidence of efficacy based on controlled trials in specific groups of patients Clinical Nutrition for Surgical Patients Mary Marian, Scott A.
