1 Research Questions

Archaeologists begin any project by asking specific questions that will guide their research. What do we want to learn that will add to our understanding of human societies?

2 Research Design

What kinds of data are needed to answer the research questions? Which strategies and methods are likely to provide the necessary data?

Guiding principle: Use strategies and methods that minimize impacts to archaeological resources.

3 Permits

Obtain all necessary permits (federal, state, local).

4 Fieldwork

Depending on the research design, fieldwork might include pedestrian (walking) survey, remote-sensing survey, excavation, or any combination of these. Provenience (location) information and field observations are entered into computer databases.

5 Laboratory Work

Artifacts are cleaned, cataloged, and analyzed. Samples (e.g., tree-ring, botanical, faunal) are processed and analyzed by specialists. Analytical data are entered into computer databases.

6 Data Analysis & Interpretation

Archaeologists analyze field and laboratory data, searching for and interpreting patterns that will help them answer the research questions. This often involves comparative analyses, statistical tests, and computer simulations.

7 Publication

Archaeologists share the results of their research in professional and popular publications.

8 Curation

Artifacts, samples, and paper and digital documentation, including maps and photographs, are archived in perpetuity.
