Pioneers: Behaviour, abilities, and activity of early Homo in European landscapes around the western Mediterranean basin ~1.3-0.05 Ma. Michael J. Walker, 2017-06-30 Archaic humans were present for over a million years in western Mediterranean Europe where they left very many traces of their early stone age activities and behaviour and sometimes even human skeletal remains This book evaluates archaeological findings about their life ways at many important sites in Italy southern France and Spain Environmental Issues in the Mediterranean John B. Thornes, John Wainwright, 2004-03 The Mediterranean has been subject to changing human settlement and land use patterns for millennia southern France bordering on the Mediterranean and southern Rh ne valley This period has traditionally been viewed as characterised by substantial lithic assemblage diversity Discussion of this diversity however often ignores other non lithic variables the topographic nature of the contexts of the lithic assemblages and the faunal data often found alongside stone tools These form the primary basis of the present study Two related databases form the backbone of the research followed by an account of the prevailing environmental conditions at the time of the Middle Palaeolithic and a discussion of the available faunal data as a reflection of these environments Although some environmental reflection can be observed the faunal material that is available is a greater reflection of local taphonomic events than of prevailing regional ecological conditions
