Architecture and Empire in Jamaica Louis P. Nelson, 2016-01-01 Through Creole houses and merchant stores to sugar fields and boiling houses Jamaica played a leading role in the formation of both the early modern Atlantic world and the British Empire Architecture and Empire in Jamaica offers the first scholarly analysis of Jamaican architecture in the long 18th century spanning roughly from the Port Royal earthquake of 1692 to Emancipation in 1838 In this richly illustrated study which includes hundreds of the author's own photographs and drawings Louis P Nelson examines surviving buildings and archival records to write a social history of architecture Nelson begins with an overview of the architecture of the West African slave trade then moves to chapters framed around types of buildings and landscapes including the Jamaican plantation landscape and fortified houses to the architecture of free blacks He concludes with a consideration of Jamaican architecture in Britain By connecting the architecture of the Caribbean first to West Africa and then to Britain Nelson traces the flow of capital and makes explicit the material economic and political networks around the Atlantic

The Lancet, 1881 The Dispensaries Michael Whitfield, 2016-04-21 Dispensaries were created in cities to look after poor sick people from about 1770 until the beginning of the NHS in 1948 They were created by relatively wealthy citizens who became subscribers to these institutions They saw this as an act of philanthropy and each subscriber was given a book of tickets that could be given to sick people to enable them to access the dispensary Many doctors gave their services to the dispensaries freely but an apothecary or later on a medical officer was employed in addition to run the dispensary and to visit the sick in their homes if they were unable to visit the dispensary This is the first book to have been written that gives an overview of the creation of dispensaries and the reason they totally disappeared in 1948 although there are several booklets describing individual dispensaries The dispensary system was supported by the majority report of the Royal Commission on the Poor Law in 1909 but rejected on questionable grounds by the Minority Report upon which our welfare state has been based Currently the NHS is in crisis and this book about a former health care system suggests ways in which our health service could be remodelled for the better
