Quester by the River and Other Poems. By Anniyil Tharakan. Notre Dame: Cross Cultural Publications, 1997. ISBN 0-940121-40-9. Pp. 117. $10.00.

We live in an age of massive social change. As Alvin Toffler and John Naisbitt have argued, we are living in the early stage of a wave of global change that is sweeping aside the remains of the Industrial Revolution and replacing it with new forms of society in which city, family, business, work, and politics are radically different. For the majority, the computer and the laboratory provide the keys to the human situation. However, for some—a much smaller group—language is still the instrument that unlocks the secrets of life, as it did for Augustine, Dante, and Shakespeare. The author of this book of poetry, a scholar and artist educated in India and America, shares the latter conviction.

Quester by the River and Other Poems is an attempt to unify faith with aesthetics in a cultural context: the faith is that of a Catholic priest-teacher who is a Thomas Christian of the Syrian rite; the culture is the Hinduism of Kerala, India. The volume's twenty-two poems include "The Cave," "The Vedic Waters," "Lines Written after Reading Pascal's Pensees," "The Night of the Soul," "An Evening in an Indian Teashop," "My Village," and two long poems that begin and end the collection—Quester by the River and Quester by the Tomb. The concluding poem was written in 1994 after the poet visited the tomb of Blessed Alphonsa, whom thousands of devotees in Kerala honor for her life of silence and self-sacrifice.

Anniyil Tharakan's opening poem, first published in 1983 in the Journal of Aesthetics and Literature, puts into words a unique vision of life that creatively combines images from the poet's own experience with those of his great grandfather and the founding of the Christian Church in India by St. Thomas the Apostle in 52 A.D. Quester by the River is also a love poem, a joyful celebration of forest trees towering in the air, birds, wild beasts, "weeds and branches, myrtles and roses" that make their homes where the sacred river Periyar ebbs and flows through one of the Malabar Coast's most beautiful wildlife sanctuaries.

Written not long after Christmas in 1982 and begun on the poet's fortieth birthday, one of those milestones that causes the religious to reflect on mortality and the upwardly-mobile to reassess their place in the academy or in the corporate universe, Quester by the River speaks prayerfully about life and death but mostly about the self's mysterious journey in time. With the poet's eye for what is crucial, Tharakan, who is currently President of St. John's College affiliated with the University of Kerala, starts his personal journey with a celebration of the day of his birth. He then moves forward as he sees "scraps of life scattered behind [him]," and in a style that recalls Dante and St. John of the Cross his quest takes him neither to the heart of darkness nor to the black depths of the Periyar but rather to the uplifting discovery of the nearness and beauty of a palpably present "other"—his inner self, soul, his "beloved," and his "Christ."

Throughout this 100-verse, 400-line, self-revelatory voyage to the inner realms of personal being, Tharakan bears witness to Plato's teaching that poetry pierces the gaps between the material world of sensory perception and the transcendent

Quester by the River and Other Poems Anniyil Tharakan, 1997 With an awed and passionate sense of history rarely seen in contemporary Indian literature Anniyil Tharakan of Kerala India writes a poetry which unifies aesthetics intellectuality and faith as part of a single poetic process All through his works there is an ongoing oriental quest for the Divine symbolically expressed as the other or the thou Rooted in the soul of India with its Hindu ethos mingling beautifully with his Christian faith Tharakan's poetry refers back to ancient Indian literature and does so constantly and consistently The influence of St John of the Cross is perceptible in many lines Likewise it is not incidental that all through the poems the human self telescopes into the universe of matter The convergence of spirit and matter which one notes here is due very much to Teilhard de Chardin's influence on him

Irwin, 2011-11-17 In one of his letters Hart Crane wrote Appollinaire lived in Paris I live in Cleveland Ohio comparing misspelling and all the great French poet's cosmopolitan roots to his own more modest ones in the midwestern United States. Rebelling against the notion that his work should relate to some European school of thought, Crane defiantly asserted his freedom to be himself a true American writer. John T. Irwin, long a passionate and brilliant critic of Crane, gives readers the first major interpretation of the poet's work in decades. Irwin aims to show that Hart Crane's epic The Bridge is the best twentieth-century long poem in English. Irwin convincingly argues that compared to other long poems of the century, The Bridge is the richest and most wide-ranging in its mythic and historical resonances, the most inventive in its combination of literary and visual structures, the most subtle and compelling in its psychological underpinnings. Irwin brings a wealth of new and varied scholarship to bear on his critical reading of the work, from art history to biography to classical literature to philosophy, revealing The Bridge to be the near-perfect synthesis of American myth and history that Crane intended. Irwin contends that the most successful entryway to Crane's notoriously difficult shorter poems is through a close reading of The Bridge. Having admirably accomplished this, Irwin analyzes Crane's poems in White Buildings and his last poem, The Broken Tower, through the larger context of his epic, showing how Crane in the best of these worked out the structures and images that were fully developed in The Bridge. Thoughtful, deliberate, and extraordinarily learned, this is the most complete and careful reading of Crane's poetry available. Hart Crane may have lived in Cleveland, Ohio, but as Irwin masterfully shows, his poems stand among the greatest written in the English language. Romantic Revolutions Kenneth R. Johnston, 1990

Eliot, Joyce, and Company Stanley Sultan, 1987 This study explores the relations of T. S. Eliot and James Joyce with certain antecedents such as Dante, Flaubert, and Baudelaire, with contemporaries including Pound and Yeats, and with their readers in order to illuminate the authors' historic mutual venture in English literature. The Cambridge Companion to English Poets Claude Rawson, 2011-01-27 This volume provides lively and authoritative introductions to twenty-nine of the most important British and Irish poets from Geoffrey Chaucer to Philip Larkin. The list includes, among others, Shakespeare, Donne, Milton, Wordsworth, Browning, Yeats, and T. S. Eliot, and represents the tradition of English poetry at its best. Each contributor offers a new assessment of a single poet's achievement and importance, with readings of the most important poems. The essays, written by leading experts, are personal responses written in clear, vivid language, free of academic jargon, and aim to inform, arouse interest, and deepen understanding. Ted Hughes' Art of Healing Daniel Xerri, 2010 The late Ted Hughes felt that healing was the most fundamental characteristic of all poetry; yet until now there has been no monograph on Hughes' conception of poetry as a healing device. This study discusses and interprets the healing quality in Hughes' poetic works and evaluates the poet's notion of its significance for human civilization. Research includes Hughes and the immediate post-war generation of poets in Britain and Ireland, the Movement poets, and Hughes' relations with them. Hughes as a cultural critic who perceives himself and his poetic talent as possessing redemptive function. Five chapters are devoted to Hughes' published works, starting with Hawk in the Rain and Lupercal; the collections are discussed, focusing on violence as a manifestation of energy lacking in human affairs CAVE BIRDS is analyzed in terms of the poet's adoption of alchemical motifs as a means of showing the quester's journey to redemption MOORTOWN is made up of four parts and the healing cycle present in each of those parts is adumbrated along with analysis of arcana use of symbolism and literary allusions RIVER is discussed with a view to clarifying Hughes' interest in light healing and the redemptive elements of the end of the quest Xerri also discusses Hughes as a skeptic and as a poet willing to explore the healing quest itself with an eye on spiritual discipline in the face of existential voids An excellent study that belongs in any serious collection of Hughes work British 20th c poetry and the art of poetics Ray Hanna North American Literary Review Georgetown      The Oxford Handbook of Percy Bysshe Shelley Madeleine Callaghan, 2013 The book is an authoritative and up to date collection of original essays on one of the greatest of all English poets Percy Bysshe Shelley It covers a wide range of topics exploring Shelley's life and work from various angles      The Stanford Illustrated Review, 1924
