

APA DOCUMENTATION

"You have to be some kind of forensic expert to figure out APA rules." - One frustrated student
We hope this Permachart will change all that.

WHY DOCUMENT WELL?

1. To enable readers to retrieve and to use your sources
2. To give due credit to your sources (to avoid plagiarism)
3. To demonstrate your ability to work meticulously

This Permachart is based on the sixth edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (APA) (2010), which explains in greater detail the requirements for papers in disciplines such as psychology, sociology, nursing, social work, gerontology, administration, and other behavioral and social sciences. Your instructor will inform you which documentation style to follow.

INSTRUCTOR'S PREFERENCE

For student papers, an instructor or a discipline may modify APA requirements. For example, student papers may not require a title page or an abstract—a one-paragraph summary. Such modifications take precedence during that course.

For more info visit: www.apastyle.org

WAYS TO USE SOURCES

See Sample Paper for examples.

QUOTING

Short quotations (≤40)

Enclose quotations of fewer than 40 words with double quotation marks. Example: Spier (2001) states that, "childbirth is the event that initiates women into motherhood" (p. 42).

- If your quotation concludes a sentence, you should place the period after the final parenthesis.
- Punctuation at the end of the quoted sentence can be changed or removed.

Long quotations (>40)

Use block quotation format for 40 words or more.

- Do not use quotation marks.
- Begin double-spacing between lines.
- The final parenthesis goes after the final period.

PARAPHRASING

Paraphrasing refers to:

- summarizing a written passage in your own words

- rearranging the order of a sentence
- changing some of the words.

Reference only author and year.

As with quoting directly, due credit must be given to the original author by citing that author.

Are page numbers necessary when paraphrasing?

Include page numbers when paraphrasing, if possible. While page numbers are not mandatory, the Publication Manual encourages authors to "provide a page or paragraph number, especially when it would help an interested reader locate the relevant passage in a long or complex text" (2010, p. 127). Use p. for citations of one page; use pp. for citations of more than one page. List all authors' names when there are two authors. For up to six authors, list all authors in the first in-text reference. For any in-text reference after that, list the first author's name, et al., and the year of publication.

USING IDEAS: AVOID PLAGIARIZING

Borrowed ideas must also be cited. You are guilty of plagiarizing if you do not acknowledge the source of an idea you use. This principle extends beyond written work to include conversations and other forms of personal communication.

PET PEEVE: IT'S/IT'S

The only time this word has an apostrophe is when it's a contraction of it is. And since contractions are not recommended in formal writing, you will never need it's in your academic writing. It is the possessive form of it, as in "The dog wagged its tail."
