Bounding Biomedicine Colleen Derkatch, 2016-04-21 During the 1990s unprecedented numbers of Americans turned to complementary and alternative medicine CAM an umbrella term encompassing health practices such as chiropractic energy healing herbal medicine homeopathy meditation naturopathy and traditional Chinese medicine By 1997 nearly half the US population was seeking CAM in one form or another spending at least 27 billion out of pocket annually on related products and services As CAM rose in popularity over the decade so did mainstream medicine's interest in understanding whether those practices actually worked and how Medical researchers devoted considerable effort to testing CAM interventions in clinical trials and medical educators scrambled to assist physicians in advising patients about CAM In Bounding Biomedicine Colleen Derkatch examines how the rhetorical discourse around the published research on this issue allowed the medical profession to maintain its position of privilege and prestige throughout this process even as its place at the top of the healthcare hierarchy appeared to be weakening Her research focuses on the ground breaking and somewhat controversial CAM themed issues of The Journal of the American Medical Association and its nine specialized Archives journals from 1998 demonstrating how these texts performed rhetorical boundary work for the medical profession As Derkatch reveals the question of how to test healthcare practices that don't fit easily or at all within mainstream Western medical frameworks sweeps us into the realm of medical knowledge making the research teams clinical trials and medical journals that determine which treatments are safe and effective and also out into the world where doctors meet patients illnesses find treatment and values practices policies and priorities intersect Through Bounding Biomedicine Derkatch shows exactly how narratives of medicine's entanglements with competing models of healthcare shape not only the historical episodes they narrate but also the very fabric of medical knowledge itself and how the medical profession is made and remade through its own discursive activity

Handbook of Research Methods in Health Psychology Deborah Ragin, Julian Keenan, 2020-11-29 In this comprehensive handbook Ragin

and Keenan present an all encompassing analysis of the variety of different methods used in health psychology research. Featuring interdisciplinary collaborations from leading academics, this meticulously written volume is a guide to conducting cutting edge research using tested and vetted best practices. It explains important research techniques, why they are selected, and how they are conducted. The book critically examines both cutting edge methods such as those used in NextGen genetics, nudge theory, and the brain's vulnerability to addiction, as well as the classic methods including cortisol measurement, survey, and environmental study. The topics of the book span the gamut of the health psychology field, from neuroimaging and statistical analysis to socioeconomic issues such as the policies used to address diseases in Africa, anti-vaxers, and the disproportionate impact of climate change on impoverished people. With each section featuring examples of best research practices, recommendations for study samples, accurate use of instrumentation, analytical techniques, and advanced level data analysis, this book will be an essential text for both emerging student researchers and experts in the field, and an indispensable resource in health psychology programs.

Interrogating Gendered Pathologies Erin Clark, Michelle F. Eble, 2020-09-01
Interrogating Gendered Pathologies points out and critiques unjust patterns of pathology. Erin A. Frost and Michelle F. Eble assemble a transdisciplinary approach from technologies, rhetorics, philosophies, epistemologies, and biomedical data to consider the effects of biomedicine's gendered norms on people's lives. Using a range of complementary and intersectional theoretical approaches, contributors ask questions about rhetoric's role in healthcare and how it differs depending on patient embodiment and the ways nonnormative bodies are pathologized. These chapters engage common narratives about the ways in which gender in healthcare is secondary and highlights the stories of people who have battled to prioritize their own bodies through extraordinary difficulties. Employing a multiplicity of voices, the book represents a number of different perspectives on what it might look like to return health and medical data to embodied experience, to consider the effects of gendered and intersectional biomedical norms on lived realities, and to subvert the power of institutions in ways that move us toward biomedical justice. This collection contributes to the burgeoning field of health and medical rhetorics by rhetorically and theoretically intervening in what are often seen as objective and neutral decisions related to the body and to scientific and medical data about bodies. Interrogating Gendered Pathologies will be of interest to feminist scholars in the field of rhetoric and writing studies, specifically those in the rhetorics of health and medicine, as well as scholars of technical communication, feminist studies, gender studies, technoscience studies, and bioethics.
