

Implementing School Restructuring in the Inner City

Louis F. Mirón, Edward P. St. John, and Betty Davidson

The purpose of this research was to examine school reform at a local level. Our analysis centered on the impact that the Accelerated Schools model had on two inner-city elementary schools in New Orleans. Key to our interpretation was addressing prevalent social issues, including poverty, racism, and single-parent families, embedded in everyday life in urban communities. The findings illuminate the need to resolve racial, social, and ideological conflicts for school change to take root in inner-city schools.

Today, there is much discussion of the impact of school reform on teaching and learning, school organization, and parental involvement. Over a decade has passed since the National Commission on Excellence in Education issued its landmark A Nation at Risk report wherein it described the nation's system of public schools as "a rising tide of mediocrity" (NCEE, 1983, p. 5). Numerous studies have documented the exhaustive production of reform programs at all levels of the public school system—federal, state, and local. Research groups, such as the Center for Policy Research in Education, have sought to quantify the impact of reform activities on such outcome measures as student achievement and curriculum change (Clune, 1989).

The bulk of reform¹ initiatives has concentrated on the state level. By and large state reforms have either bypassed urban schools and school districts (Levin, 1988), or the special conditions facing these schools (Boyd, 1989; Davis & McCaul, 1991; Kozol, 1991; Mirón, 1990) have made it difficult to implement changes in ways that are meaningful to principals, teachers, students, and parents in inner-city schools on a day-to-day basis. The national educational reform movement has failed to address the underlying social issues

Elmore, Penelope L. Peterson, Sarah J. McCarthey, 1996-03-15 Restructuring in the Classroom goes into the classrooms of three elementary schools to take a detailed look at how teachers responded to changes in structure in their schools The authors interviewed principals teachers parents support staff and district personnel to produce in depth case studies of schools at various stages of restructuring showing what the school had done to change its structure and how those changes had occurred Selecting four teachers in each school for closer observation and discussion the authors reveal how those teachers responded to the changes around them in their day to day practice in the classroom They show for example how teaching practice is or is not affected by changes in the way students are grouped for learning in the way teachers relate to groups of students and to each other and in the way time is allocated to subject matter School Effectiveness for Whom? Roger Slee, Sally Tomlinson, Gaby Weiner, 2003-05-20 School effectiveness research together with what is now described as the school improvement movement Barber 1996 has captured both the Conservative and New Labour imaginations as a basis for educational planning and policy making in the UK Internationally school effectiveness enjoys and expanding and enthusiastic audience This book provides a critique of this research genre particularly in the light of the recent calls for teaching to go back to the basics The editors argue that this school effectiveness research is simplistic in its analysis of educational problems Far from getting to the bottom of the problem of failing students and schools they argue these movements are merely scratching at the surface of the problems and coming up with notions for superficial improvements

Adequate Yearly Progress AYP for five consecutive years entered into restructuring as mandated by the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 My study examines the perceptions of teachers entering into their first year of school restructuring due to failure to achieve AYP Four research questions guided my inquiry What are the perceptions of teachers regarding their school s failure to make Adequate Yearly Progress What are the understandings of teachers regarding the restructuring process What are the perceptions of teachers regarding the restructuring process In what ways have their perceptions of the restructuring process changed their reading instruction The purpose of this study is to gain insight into teachers perceptions of AYP and its restructuring consequences I applied grounded theory ethnography as a research tool and critical discourse analysis as a research tool to this organizational case study Twelve teachers from Star Elementary School a rural Title I elementary school served as participants I collected data using field notes semi structured interviews and surveys I collected data for a total of 148 25 hours over a period of 31 days at Star Elementary School My analysis of the data revealed while teachers placed blame on students parents and policy makers they also looked inwardly to their own shortfalls and contributions to AYP failure Teachers understood the specific consequences related to AYP failure and demonstrated an understanding of data analysis of their student state test scores Teachers did not demonstrate an understanding that NCLB 2001 allows for teachers to be part of the decision making process regarding curriculum and instruction at their school Teachers also reported decreased authority and autonomy due to Star s failure to make AYP My research supports the Restructuring Inverse Impact Theory consequences of NCLB s 2001 reform mandates intended to enhance student achievement may negatively impact that achievement due to the undermining of teacher efficacy The Practice and Theory of School of understanding or initiating educational change more deeply reflectively and realistically Educational change and reform have rarely had so much prominence within public policy in so many different places Educational change is ubiquitous It figures large in Presidential and Prime Ministerial speeches It is at or near the top of many National policy agendas Everywhere educational change is not only a policy priority but also major public news Yet action to bring about educational change usually exceeds people's understanding of how to do so effectively

Schools Making a Difference Martin Thrupp, 1999-05-16 Does an effective school really come about through the actions of teachers and school leaders or does it also require an advantaged student intake This question reflects a longstanding research debate about whether or not the social class mix of a school's student intake has much effect on individual achievement Schools Making a Difference Let's Be Realistic presents new evidence which suggests that school mix is likely to be important because of the way many school processes are deeply influenced by student intake characteristics Low socioeconomic schools face numerous intake related constraints which make them highly resistant to improvement efforts By suggesting that failing schools are often overwhelmed rather than ineffective this book provides a sympathetic reappraisal of the performance of teachers and school leaders in such schools It also offers a critical response to the often unrealistic claims of the school effectiveness and school improvement movement and a fresh critique of market reforms in education Teachers and Schooling Making A Difference
