Informing an Effective Response to Climate Change National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Atmospheric Sciences and Climate, America's Climate Choices: Panel on Informing Effective Decisions and Actions Related to Climate Change, 2011-01-07
Global climate change is one of America's most significant long term policy challenges. Human activity especially the use of fossil fuels industrial processes livestock production waste disposal and land use change is affecting global average temperatures snow and ice cover sea level ocean acidity growing seasons and precipitation patterns ecosystems and human health. Climate related decisions are being carried out by almost every agency of the federal government as well as many state and local government leaders and agencies businesses and individual citizens. Decision makers must contend with the availability and quality of information the efficacy of proposed solutions the unanticipated consequences resulting from decisions the challenge of implementing chosen actions and must consider how to sustain the action over time and respond to new information. Informing an Effective Response to Climate Change a volume in the America's Climate Choices series describes and assesses different activities products strategies and tools for informing decision makers about climate change and helping them plan and execute effective integrated responses. It discusses who is making decisions on the local state and national levels who should be providing information to make decisions and how that information should be provided. It covers all levels of decision making including international state and individual decision making. While most existing research has focused on the physical aspect of climate change Informing an Effective Response to Climate Change employs theory and case study to describe the efforts undertaken so far and to guide the development of future decision making resources. Informing an Effective Response to Climate Change offers much needed guidance to those creating public policy and assists in implementing that policy. The information presented in this book will be invaluable to the research community especially social scientists studying climate change practitioners of decision making assistance including advocacy organizations non profits and government agencies and college level teachers and students.
