Health Change in the Asia-Pacific Region Ryutaro Ohtsuka, Stanley J. Ulijaszek, 2007-05-24 The Asia Pacific region has seen great social environmental and economic change across the past century leading to dramatic changes in the health profiles of all populations represented in South East and East Asia Pacific Islands and the islands of Melanesia This volume considers evidence concerning prehistoric migration and colonial regional and global processes in the production of health change in the Asia Pacific region Notably it examines ways in which a health pattern dominated by under nutrition and infection has been displaced in many ways and is being displaced elsewhere by over nutrition and the degenerative diseases associated with it This book presents a cohesive view of the ways in which exchange relationships economic modernization migration and transnational linkages interact with changing rural subsistence ecologies to influence health patterns in this region Advances in Mercury Toxicology Tsuguyoshi Suzuki, Nobumasa Imura, Thomas W. Clarkson, 2013-11-11 This book is based on an international meeting organized by the University of Tokyo and the University of Rochester and is published as one belonging to the series of Rochester International Conferences in Environmental Toxicity The meeting on Advances in Mercury Toxicology was held at the University of Tokyo on August 1 to 3 1990 The invited papers are published in this book along with an Overview chapter that was written by the editors at a meeting held at the University of Rochester on August 1 to 2 1991 The purpose of the meeting was to assemble leading scientists to discuss their most recent findings on the toxicology of mercury The time was opportune Considerable progress has been made on the environmental fate and toxicology of mercury Recent findings have given new insight into the global model for mercury Transport in the atmosphere extends great distances resulting in pollution of lakes and rivers far distant from the source of mercury release The process of methylation leads to accumulation of methylmercury in fish and thus in the human diet New evidence indicates that acid rain and the impoundment of water for hydroelectric purposes affects the methylation and bioaccumulation processes resulting in higher levels of methylmercury in fish Redefining Nature Roy Ellen, Katsuyoshi Fukui, 2021-01-07 How can anthropology improve our understanding of the interrelationship between nature and culture What can anthropology contribute to practical debates which depend on particular definitions of nature such as that concerning sustainable development Humankind has evolved over several million years by living in and utilizing nature and by assimilating it into culture Indeed the technological and cultural advancement of the species has been widely acknowledged to rest upon human domination and control of nature Yet by the 1960s the idea of culture in confrontation with nature was being challenged by science philosophy and the environmental movement Anthropology is increasingly concerned with such issues as they become more urgent for humankind as a whole This important book reviews the current state of the concepts of nature we use both as scientific devices and ideological constructs and is organised around three themes nature as a cultural construction the cultural management of the environment and relations between plants animals and humans The Biodemography of Subsistence Farming James W. Wood,2020-04-23 Viewing the subsistence farm as primarily a demographic enterprise to create and support a family this book offers an integrated view of the demography and ecology of preindustrial farming Taking an interdisciplinary perspective it examines how traditional farming practices interact with demographic processes such as childbearing death and family formation It includes topics such as household nutrition physiological work capacity health and resistance to infectious diseases as well as reproductive performance and mortality The book argues that the farming household is the most informative scale at which to study the biodemography and physiological ecology of preindustrial non commercial agriculture It offers a balanced appraisal of the farming system considering its strengths and limitations as well as the implications of viewing it as a demographic enterprise rather than an economic one A valuable resource for graduate students and researchers in biological and physical anthropology cultural anthropology natural resource management agriculture and ecology Research in Human Ecology Luc Hens,1998
