the voices of women talking about their wartime railway experiences using interviews by the Friends of the National Railway Museum Many were working in men s jobs or working with men for the first time and these interviews offer tantalising glimpses of conditions sometimes under great danger What was it about railway work that attracted them It s fascinating to contrast their voices with the way they were portrayed in official publicity campaigns and in the light of attitudes to women working in the 1940s These women talk about their difficulties in a workplace not designed for women no toilets for example the attitudes of their families what they thought about American GIs and Italian POWs how they coped with swearing and troublesome colleagues rules about stockings They describe devastating air raids and being thrust into tough responsibilities for the first time This book fills a gap as most books on women s wartime roles focus on the military services or industrial work It offers valuable insights into the perceptions and concerns of these young women As generations die out and families lose a direct connection it becomes more important to be able to share their voices with a wider audience Railroad Vision Anne M. Railroad concludes the story of the iconic transportation company covering its long decline from the 1930s to its merger with the New York Central Railroad in 1968 Despite some parallels with World War I the experience of World War II had a substantially different impact on the Pennsylvania Railroad The introduction of new technologies personnel and commuter routes had significant effects on this giant of American transportation The recession of 1958 sparked a period of decline from which it and many other railroads struggled to fully recover The Pennsylvania Railroad The Long Decline 1933 1968 provides an unparalleled look at the final years of this legendary company which in its prime was the largest corporation in the world with a budget second only to that of the US federal government
