Tim McClanahan, George Branch, 2008-04-16 Biologists have made significant advances in our understanding of the Earth's shallow subtidal marine ecosystems but the findings on these disparate regions have never before been documented and gathered in a single volume Now in Food Webs and the Dynamics of Marine Reefs Tim R McClanahan and George M Branch fill this lacuna with a comparative and comprehensive collection of nine essays written by experts on specific aquatic regions Each essay focuses on the food webs of a respective ecosystem and the factors affecting these communities from the intense and direct pressure of human influence on fisheries to the multi vector contributors to climate change The book covers nine shallow water marine ecosystems from selected areas throughout the world four coral reef systems three hard bottom systems and two kelp systems In summarizing their organization human influence on them and recent developments in these ecosystems the authors contribute to our understanding of their ecological organization and management Food Webs and the Dynamics of Marine Reefs will be a useful tool for all benthic marine investigators providing an expert comparative view of these aquatic regions Competition and Coexistence Ulrich Sommer,Boris Worm,2012-12-06 The question Why are there so many species has puzzled ecologist for a long time Initially an academic question it has gained practical interest by the recent awareness of global biodiversity loss Species diversity in local ecosystems has always been discussed in relation to the problem of competitive exclusion and the apparent contradiction between the competitive exclusion principle and the overwhelming richness of species found in nature Competition as a mechanism structuring ecological communities has never been uncontroversial Not only its importance but even its existence have been debated On the one extreme some ecologists have taken competition for granted and have used it as an explanation by default if the distribution of a species was more restricted than could be explained by physiology and dispersal history For decades competition has been a core mechanism behind popular concepts like ecological niche succession limiting similarity and character displacement among others For some competition has almost become synonymous with the Darwinian struggle for existence although simple plausibility should tell us that organisms have to struggle against much more than competitors e g predators parasites pathogens and environmental harshness
