Samet, 2014-11-04 As the post 9/11 wars wind down a literature professor at West Point explores what it means for soldiers and our country to be caught between war and peace In her critically acclaimed award winning book Soldier's Heart Elizabeth D. Samet grappled with the experience of teaching literature at the United States Military Academy at West Point Now with No Man's Land Samet contends that we are entering a new moment a no man's land between war and peace Major military deployments are winding down but soldiers are wrestling with the aftermath of war and the trials of returning home while also facing the prospect of low intensity conflicts for years to come Drawing on a range of experiences from a visit to a ward of wounded combat veterans to correspondence with former cadets from a conference on Edith Wharton and wartime experience to teaching literature and film to future officers Samet illuminates an ambiguous passage through no man's land that has left deep but difficult to read traces on our national psyche our culture our politics and most especially an entire generation of military professionals In No Man's Land Elizabeth D. Samet offers a moving urgent examination of what it means to negotiate the tensions between war and peace between over there and over here between life on the front and life at home She takes the reader on a vivid tour of this new landscape marked as much by the scars of war as by the ordinary upheavals of homecoming to capture the essence of our current historical moment for daring to step above his station However Adam finds consolation in the company of Miriam the local parson s beautiful daughter with whom he falls in love When they become engaged and Adam wins a scholarship to Oxford he starts to feel that his life is finally coming together until the outbreak of war threatens to tear everything apart From the slums of London to the riches of an Edwardian country house from the hot dark seams of a Yorkshire coal mine to the exposed terrors of the trenches in France Adam s journey from boy to man is set against the backdrop of a society violently entering the modern world

Populating No Man's Land János Mátyás Kovács,2018-09-15 This edited volume opening the new series Revisiting Communism Collectivist Economic Thought in Historical Perspective focuses on the concepts of ownership the cornerstone of political economy in Soviet type societies The authors main objective is to contribute to the still unwritten chapter on collectivism in the history books of modern economic thought They trace the lengthy evolution of economic ideas of property reform under communism leading from the doctrine of blanket nationalization to projects of moderate privatization in eight countries of Eastern Europe and China The comparative analysis sheds light upon the tireless attempts of reform minded economists in communist countries to populate the no man s land of social property with quasi private economic actors such as bodies of workers self management and managers of state owned companies For a long time these were expected to crowd out the communist nomenklatura from its actual ownership position without challenging the primacy of collective property rights The fact that even the most radical reformers came to the conclusion that such surrogate owners would not be able to break the power of the ruling elite only on the eve of the 1989 revolutions demonstrates the immense strength of collectivist ideas The authors coin the term trap of collectivism to warn those demanding nationalization or other forms of non private ownership today it is rather easy even with the best intentions to walk into this trap but it may take long decades to break out from it

Native Sons in No Man's Land Philip Auger,2000 The four writers chosen for this study James Baldwin Alice Walker John Edgar Wideman and Ernest Gaines were chosen because of their shared approach to rewriting such negative narratives of black manhood Each of these writers approaches self definition and more specifically the writing of oneself as a man as contingent on controlling discourse having some power over language and thus having the power to define the self And each of the selected works explores the possibilities of black manhoods that are humane and dignified The discursive negotiations involved in rewriting identity pose an extremely complex set of challenges associated with the realm of definition used to control the powerful signifier manhood From introduction Padres in No Man's Land Duff
