OECD Employment Outlook 2024 The Net-Zero Transition and the Labour Market OECD, 2024-07-09 The transition to net zero emissions by 2050 will have profound impacts on the labour market and the jobs of millions of workers. Aggregate effects on employment are estimated to be limited. But many jobs will be lost in the shrinking high emission industries while many others will be created in the expanding low emission activities. This edition of the OECD Employment Outlook examines the characteristics of the jobs that are likely to thrive because of the transition: green driven jobs including their attractiveness in terms of job quality and compares them to jobs in high emission industries that tend to shrink. The cost of job displacement in these latter industries is assessed along with the trajectories of workers out of them towards new opportunities and the labour market policies that can facilitate job reallocation. Particular attention is devoted to upskilling and reskilling strategies to facilitate workers' transition into fast growing green driven occupations. The distributive impacts of climate change mitigation policies are also examined with a focus on carbon pricing and options to redistribute its tax revenue to those most impacted. As usual the first chapter of the Outlook assesses recent labour market developments including wage trends but also provides an update of the OECD Job Quality indicators. Formats and Layouts for

It includes country studies of the USA, Canada, Australia, the UK, New Zealand and Ireland where there has been increasing concern about the prevalence of such work and working time uncertainty as well as varying levels of public policy debate on regulation. The book incorporates a comparative review of zero hours work based on the findings of the country studies. This pays particular attention to state regulatory responses to zero hours work and incorporates the sociological concepts of accumulation and legitimation functions of the state. Exploring the regulation of zero hours work beyond individual countries the book includes an analysis of external regulation of zero hours work at the supranational level namely the European Union and ILO. Further it assesses the implications of zero hours for workers in new sectors of economic activity particularly the impact of the platform or gig economy on the fundamental nature of the employment relationship It also considers the societal implications of zero hours work and the ethical responsibilities of employers and governments towards workers as citizens Electrical Engineer of Australia & New Zealand ,1929 Human Resource Management, 11th Edition Raymond J. Students and Net Migration Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Business, Innovation and Skills Committee,2012-09-06 This report calls on the Government to record overseas students under a classification that does not count against the overall limit on net migration in order to allow the UK to continue to expand its share of the overseas student market The Committee notes the Government s desire to reduce net migration However there is a clear conflict between this policy and the desire to attract more overseas students to the UK Moreover the way in which the policy has been implemented and measured is clearly having a detrimental impact At a time of such economic difficulty it is vital that the Department for Business Innovation and Skills demonstrates it has an active strategy to support the expansion of this important and lucrative market The Committee argues that for domestic policy purposes overseas students should be recorded under a separate classification and not be counted against the overall limit on net migration along similar lines to the United States The Committee supports the Government s policy to remove bogus students and colleges from our Higher Education system However the way in which this policy is communicated must be handled carefully to ensure it does not give the impression that the UK no longer welcomes genuine students Women's Work is Never Done Sylvia
