A People's History of England (Classic Reprint) Arthur Leslie Morton, 2018-12-24 Excerpt from A People's History of England Early maps show a world in which Britain is a remote outpost a shapeless cluster of islands thrust out into the encircling ocean But in some of these maps a significant tilt brings their South western coast close to the North of Spain reminding us that earlier still centuries before the making of any maps that have survived Britain lay not outside the world but on a regular and frequented trade route which linked Mediterranean civilisation with the amber bearing North It was by this long sea route and not across the Dover Straits or the Channel that civilisation first reached these shores In Cornwall in Ireland and along the coast of Wales and Scotland cluster the monuments left by Iberian or Megalithic men who reached and peopled Britain between 3000 and 2000 A final group of such monuments in Sutherland the last point at which their ships touched land before pushing across the North Sea to Scandinavia makes the route and its Objective abundantly clear At this time the land subsidence which had begun a thousand or so years earlier was still going on and the apparently shorter and safer route up Channel and along the European coast was closed if not by a land bridge joining Britain to the continent then by straits that were narrow shifting shoaling and swept by rapid tides This is perhaps the first reason for the settlement of Iberian man in Britain About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
