Radiation Risk, Risk Perception and Social Constructions J. B. Reitan, G. N. Kelly, 1996      Risks in Technological Systems Göran Grimvall, Åke Holmgren, Per Jacobsson, Torbjörn Thedéen, 2009-11-03 Risks in Technological Systems is an interdisciplinary university textbook and a book for the educated reader on the risks of today's society. In order to understand and analyze risks associated with the engineering systems on which modern society relies, other concerns have to be addressed besides technical aspects. In contrast to many academic textbooks dealing with technological risks, this book has a unique interdisciplinary character that presents technological risks in their own context. Twenty-four scientists have come together to present their views on risks in technological systems. Their scientific disciplines cover not only engineering, economics, and medicine but also history, psychology, literature, and philosophy. Taken together, these contributions provide a broad but accurate interdisciplinary introduction to a field of increasing global interest as well as rich opportunities to achieve in-depth knowledge of the subject.      The Social and Cultural Construction of Risk B.B. Johnson, V.T. Covello, 2012-12-06 The Social and Cultural Construction of Risk: Issues, Methods, and Case Studies. Vincent T. Covello and Branden B. Johnson. Risks to health, safety, and the environment abound in the world, and people cope as best they can. But before action can be taken to control, reduce, or eliminate these risks, decisions must be made about which risks are important and which risks can safely be ignored. The challenge for decision makers is that consensus on these matters is often lacking. Risks believed by some individuals and groups to be tolerable or acceptable, such as the risks of nuclear power or industrial pollutants, are intolerable and unacceptable to others. This book addresses this issue by exploring how particular technological risks come to be selected for societal attention and action. Each section of the volume examines from a different perspective how individuals, groups, communities, and societies decide what is risky, how risky it is, and what should be done. The writing of this book was inspired by another book, Risk and Culture: An Essay on the Selection of Technological and Environmental Dangers, published in 1982 and written by two distinguished scholars, Mary Douglas, a British social anthropologist, and Aaron Wildavsky, an American political scientist. The book received wide critical attention and offered several provocative ideas on the nature of risk, selection, perception, and acceptance.      What is Safe? David R. Williams, 1998 Is it safe? What are the risks involved? are questions frequently asked by members of the public. This unique book explains the fundamental problems faced in modern-day life. Terms such as risk and safe are clearly defined, and the risks encountered between birth and death are discussed, including transport, the home, healthcare, diet, and the workplace. The perception of risk and the risks from radiation, natural radwaste, and nuclear reactors are covered, along with management of risk and the psychology of risk perception. What is Safe? The Risks of Living in a Nuclear Age is illustrated with examples from the most deeply researched areas. Written for the lay person, the volume also includes a complete reprint of the late Lord Walter Marshall's famous lecture, The Radioactive Garden. It will be of interest to students, teachers,

This book argues yes, offering leaders, especially those in disaster management, a way to improve their ability to lead, serve and protect others during disasters and crises. Drawing upon his own experiences as a disaster management specialist as well as high-level interviews with disaster management leaders from the USA, Australia and New Zealand, Croweller bridges theory and practice to achieve three objectives. Firstly, to establish the political and socio-cultural context in which disaster management leaders find themselves when seeking to protect citizens and minimise their suffering and vulnerability. Secondly, to provide an empirical account of how certain sociocultural influences affect their efficacy as leaders and that of their organisations when seeking to improve well-being, provide protection and reduce suffering and vulnerability. Thirdly, to propose a relational leadership framework centred upon an ethic of compassion and supported by behaviours, characteristics and practices that can guide leaders when addressing the causes of suffering and vulnerability across the entire disaster management cycle. This framework progressively emerges as the reader navigates their way through each chapter. An essential text for aspiring and experienced leaders, especially those in the fields of Emergency Medical Services, fire services, law enforcement and emergency management. It will also appeal to students and researchers in related disciplines.      Risk in Social Science Peter Taylor-Gooby, Jens O.
