“Using the source, evaluate the effectiveness of constitutional reform since 1997.”

Constitutional reform in the United Kingdom began to majorly progress and evolve from 1997, and since then, gradual changes and amendments have been made to the constitution of the UK. Reforms have been made to improve the protection of human rights, decentralise power away from central government and in many other areas. In this essay, I will be discussing the effectiveness of the constitutional reform since 1997 and how overall it has been mainly effective in reforming areas of the UK constitution.

The first major objective in constitutional reform since 1997 is improving democratic legitimacy and accountability. This includes electoral reform as well as reforms linking to the House of Lords. In terms of improving democratic legitimacy and accountability through constitutional reform in the UK, it has proven to be rather unsuccessful and ineffective. With reference to the source, the overall reform in the House of Lords could be deemed as a failure. The reasoning behind this statement is that the House of Lords still remains unelected up until this day. Despite the fact that some minimal amendments were made, such as reducing the number of hereditary peers, removal of the ability to veto legislation as well as increasing the number of women in parliament, the main aim of the reform was not actually met. Stage 2 of House of Lords reform was never completed, and as a result, this justifies the idea that constitutional reform was ineffective, especially in this field. Furthermore, very narrow progress was made in terms of electoral reform in the UK, which also falls under improving democratic legitimacy and accountability. When looking at reform regarding proportional representation in the whole of the UK, it was only partly successful. The 2011 Alternative Vote referendum had a 42%
