when to train How to properly investigate harassment How to handle the reluctant employee Who should investigate Determining credibility Understanding and avoiding defamation Protecting the accuser and the accused during the investigation And much more Sexual harassment may expose employers to automatic liability under certain circumstances and regardless of legal liability the negative publicity high cost of turnover lowered employee morale and the potential expenses associated with lawsuits are just some of the devastating effects sexual harassment can have on the workplace Every organization's best defense is a proper offense and Sexual Harassment A Guide to a Harassment Free Workplace is the absolutely necessary starting point Sexual Harassment Prevention Training Leslie Brett, Connecticut. Permanent Commission on the Status of Women, 2000* Increasing the Effectiveness of Sexual Harassment Prevention Through Learner Engagement Anya M. Garman, 2013 Abstract Previous research on the effectiveness of sexual harassment prevention training has shown mixed results While gender differences can account for some of these positive and negative results very little has been done to look at the instructional design of the training programs specifically the approach and language of course materials Sexual assault prevention training has yielded success using a non accusatory or bystander approach increasing both engagement and positive attitudes towards the training The current study measured the effectiveness by applying the bystander approach to sexual harassment training using bystander language in an interactive tabletop exercise Pre and post tests results found that participants in the engagement condition had higher satisfaction scores and a greater magnitude of change between and post test scores than in the non engagement condition However the results could only support a general trend when looking at the use of bystander versus accusatory language The Effects of Training Regarding Sexual Harassment Prevention in the Workplace on the Knowledge, Skills and Motivation of Supervisory Level Staff in a Human Services Organization Janet G.
