Ninachka Nina Murray, 2007-12-04 This autobiography tells the story of an indefatigable spirit who survived the Second World War a doomed marriage the murder of her father rape and the almost endless consternation of family problems Author Dr Nina Murray was born in St Petersburg Russia in 1913 As a child she found herself part of the first of the Diaspora that marked the modern age The Communist revolution stripped her family Russian nobility of their land money privilege and title Blessed with parents who were determined to overcome the devastating reversal of their fortunes she found herself in England in the 1920s There she began the transformation from Russian Princess to professional English woman and earned her medical degree in 1937 On her journey Murray finds her life's love in her work her daughter and an eight year marriage to a Canadian admiral and crosses the paths of other fascinating lives some very well known others quite outrageous Dr

Murray's story offers a valuable lesson to immigrants in any country at any age and deals with the necessity of absorbing one's new surroundings while clinging to one's roots A Bit of a Flutter Mark Clapson, 1992 Shabby Tiger Howard Spring, 1935 Rogues and Running Dogs David Brian Plummer, 1997-12 Plummer's reminiscences of his early lurchers and the men that bred them of poaching coursing and dog fighting with his views on the different crosses used in breeding lurchers An excellent book about lurchers and their raffish owners Shooting Times After the Shock City Tom Hulme, 2019 A comparative and trans national study of urban culture in Britain and the United States from the late nineteenth to the twentieth century Using the industrial cities of Manchester and Chicago as case studies this book traces the idea of citizenship across different areas of local life in the first half of the twentieth century from philosophy and festivals to historical re enactment and public housing Coalitions of voluntary associations municipal government and local elites lambasted modern urban culture as the cause of social disintegration But rather than simply decanting the population to new and smaller settlements they tried to re imagine a reformed city as a place that could foster loyal and healthy communities Celebrating civic progress in the period since the shock city of the nineteenth century they sought to create a sense of local pride that could bracket growing class and racial tensions The diverse individuals groups and communities of the city reacted in different ways to this message Some were happy to gather under the identity of one civic banner Others held back by discriminatory structures of society chose to shape their own idea of citizenship one that looked far beyond the city for a sense of belonging and rights Historians have tended to emphasise the rise of national identity state centralisation and popular patriotism at the expense of distinctive local identities municipal autonomy and expressions of civic pride This book aims to redress the imbalance demonstrating how local ideas of belonging could still exert a powerful hold on the making of modern citizenship TOM HULME is a lecturer in the School of History Anthropology Philosophy and Politics Queen's University Belfast
