When Eagles Dared Howard

Hughes, 2012-01-30 When Eagles Dared is a salute to the men and women who participated in World War II and the filmmakers who have immortalised their stories on screen. It tells both the story of the historical events of this first truly world war and of the films that have depicted these events, comparing the cinematic myth with the historical reality as a guide to history through cinema. When Eagles Dared portrays the people who participated in the war from the evacuation of the Allied forces from France at Dunkirk through to the battle for Berlin and beyond. Each chapter discusses a theatre of war, an event, a campaign or battle by explaining the historical events as they unfold and then examines how filmmakers have represented them. Chapters discuss the war in the skies: Battle of Britain and The Dam Busters; the sea: Sink the Bismarck and The Cruel Sea; and the North African desert: The Battle of El Alamein and Tobruk. There are special mission movies including Where Eagles Dare and The Dirty Dozen; classic tales of ingenuity: The Great Escape; valour: Saving Private Ryan; and human endurance: The Bridge on the River Kwai. Offering a unique view of war through the lenses of over 150 diverse films that have shaped our perceptions of the conflict, When Eagles Dared is illustrated with rare stills and posters from this ever popular genre.

The Collected Short Stories of Ring Lardner Ring Lardner, 1929

The Red and the Black Stendhal, 1926. The son of a carpenter, Julian Sorel is inspired by the writings of Napoleon to conquer the heights of society. His initial plan to work his way up through the church is however thwarted when he is forced to accept employment as a tutor, and this rash social entrepreneur certainly has not considered the dangers of falling in love. Stendhal's novel is an amusing and piquant study of hypocrisy and free will in post-Napoleonic France.

The Expedition of Humphry Clinker Tobias George Smollett, 1929

The Guermantes Way Marcel Proust, The twittering of the birds at daybreak sounded insipid to Françoise. Every word uttered by the maids upstairs made her jump, disturbed by all their running about, she kept asking herself what they could be doing. In other words, we had moved. Certainly the servants had made no less noise in the attics of our old home, but she knew them, she had made of their comings and goings familiar events. Now she faced even silence with a strained attention. And as our new neighbourhood appeared to be as quiet as the boulevard on to which we had hitherto looked, had been noisy, the song distinct at a distance when it was still quite faint, like an orchestral motif of a passer-by brought tears to the eyes of a Françoise in exile. And so if I had been tempted to laugh at her in her misery at having to leave a house in which she was so well respected on all sides and had packed her trunks with tears according to the Use of Combray, declaring superior to all possible houses that which had been ours, on the other hand I who found it as hard to assimilate new as I found it easy to abandon old conditions, I felt myself drawn towards our old servant when I saw that this installation of herself in a building where she had not received from the hall porter who did not yet know us the marks of respect necessary to her moral wellbeing had brought her positively to the verge of dissolution She alone could understand what I was feeling certainly her young footman was not the person to do so for him who was as unlike the Combray type as it was possible to conceive packing up moving living in another district were all like taking a holiday in which the novelty of one's surroundings gave one the same sense of refreshment as if one had actually travelled he thought he was in the country and a cold in the head afforded him as though he had been sitting in a draughty railway carriage the delicious sensation of having seen the world at each fresh sneeze he rejoiced that he had found so smart a place having always longed to be with people who travelled a lot And so without giving him a thought I went straight to Françoise who in return for my having laughed at her tears over a removal which had left me cold now shewed an icy indifference to my sorrow but because she shared it The sensibility claimed by neurotic people is matched by their egotism they cannot abide the flaunting by others of the sufferings to which they pay an ever increasing attention in themselves Françoise who would not allow the least of her own ailments to pass unnoticed if I were in pain would turn her head from me so that I should not have the satisfaction of seeing my sufferings pitied or so much as observed It was the same as soon as I tried to speak to her about our new house Moreover having been obliged a day or two later to return to the house we had just left to retrieve some clothes which had been overlooked in our removal while I as a result of it had still a temperature and like a boa constrictor that has just swallowed an ox felt myself painfully distended by the sight of a long trunk which my eyes had still to digest Françoise with true feminine inconstancy came back saying that she had really thought she would stifle on our old boulevard it was so stuffy that she had found it quite a day's journey to get there that never had she seen such stairs that she would not go back to live there for a king's ransom not if you were to offer her millions a pure hypothesis and that everything everything that is to say to do with the kitchen and usual offices was much better fitted up in the new house Which it is high time now that the reader should be told and told also that we had moved into it because my grandmother not having been at all well though we took care to keep this reason from her was in need of better air was a flat forming part of the Hôtel de Guermantes
