Mackerel and the Making of Baltimore, County Cork, 1879-1913 Séamus Fitzgerald,1999 What I like most about Fitzgerald's informed and well presented pamphlet is this wherever I go on our maritime coast I see frequently in pubs old pictures depicting busy harbours of yesteryear piled high with barrels for herring or mackerel and jobs for all in season I search in vain for any documentation on this thriving activity Fitzgerald has done it and done it well for Baltimore The Irish Skipper The Irish Mackerel Fishery and the Making of an Industry J. Molloy,2004 Tracing Your Irish Ancestors John Grenham,2006 Sources for the History of Landed Estates in Ireland Terence A. M. Dooley,2000 Readers receive step by step guidance as to how to conduct their research and are alerted to some of the problems they might encounter in working with particular collections Possible avenues for research are suggested and relevant secondary works are also recommended Jacket Nineteenth-century Elementary Education in the Archdiocese of Tuam Maeve Mulryan Moloney,2001 He perceived himself as a bastion between a Protestant British system of English language non denominational national schools and his famine prone Gaelic speaking people The voice of the ordinary people of Ireland is heard loud and clear in this book before many of them fled to the Americas Canada and Australia Jacket The Management of a Major Ulster Estate in the Late Eighteenth Century W. H. Crawford,2001 James Hamilton the eighth earl of Abercorn preferred to live in a fine classical house built for him in Edinburgh in the 1960s by the eminent architect Sir William Chambers although he had considerable property about London and in Ireland Although Abercorn was an absentee the scale the range and the substance of the correspondence he maintained with his Irish agents reveals the extent and depth of his knowledge of life on the estates Several agents kept him well informed and in the years between 1757 and the earl's death in 1789 one of them also named James Hamilton wrote very detailed letters that enabled the earl to make decisions on a wide variety of matters They cover changing relationships with tenants and undertenants efforts to promote the economic and social development of the estate and the problems of his agents in coping with food crises and natural disasters Dugort, Achill Island, 1831-1861 Mealla C. Ní Ghiobúin,2001 This work traces the evolution of the settlement at Dugort from barren land to thriving village in a period of ten to twelve years By the mid 1840s it was firmly established with its schools reclaimed farmland and luxuriant crops Secondary settlements were also established at Mweelin and on the island of Inishbiggle However very strong opposition to these developments came from the Roman Catholic archbishop of Tuam and the priests he sent to the island The great famine and its impact on the Mission the departure of its founder Edward Nangle together with the falling off of voluntary contributions and emigration to the colonies and America all contributed to the final collapse of this Protestant missionary experiment Records of the Irish Catholic Church Patrick J. Corish,David C. Sheehy,2001 Readers receive step by step guidance as to how to conduct their research and are alerted to some of the problems they might encounter in working with particular collections Possible avenues for research are suggested and relevant secondary works are also recommended Jacket Church of Ireland Records Raymond Refaüssé, Patrick J. Corish, 2000 Readers receive step by step guidance as to how to conduct their research and are alerted to some of the problems they might encounter in working with particular collections Possible avenues for research are suggested and relevant secondary works are also recommended Jacket In Search of Thomas Sheahan Fintan Lane, 2001 An examination of this movement at local level reveals a complex and variegated political life involving several distinct interest groups which were capable of cooperation but also of conflict Jacket Charles Powell Leslie (II)'s Estates at Glaslough, County Monaghan, 1800-41 Anthony Doyle, 2001 It analyses the changes which took place within the local community living on these north County Monaghan estates describing how their livelihoods and their living conditions changed during these years The study illustrates how this local community and Leslie's estate business suffered severely from the post Napoleonic war recession and how this situation was exacerbated by the famine of 1817 It demonstrates Leslie's response to this recession and how he managed his estate business so that unlike some of his contemporaries estates it did not drift towards bankruptcy Jacket Books Ireland, 1999 American Book Publishing Record, 1999 Mackerel and the Making of Baltimore Co.
