

Introduction: Application of Economic Principles

Economics is a systematic way of thinking about a wider range of personal and social problems. One is persons has measured other perspectives and economists, opportunities to explain others against every other. These principles allow the thinker to test out some basic economic in the daily aspects of the work world, in the statements of politicians and special interest groups, and in the conversations of friends and neighbors. The application of these principles allows people to start more concerned over others lives by increasing their ability to understand what goes on around them.

It doesn't require a Ph.D. in economics to master the systematic way of thinking. In fact, this way of thinking rests upon a set of very simple principles:

1. Economic thinking recognizes that providing more goods involves a cost in sacrifice of other goods. More goods are not free.
2. Economic thinking makes economists aware implicitly recognize that economic goods are scarce and allows answers to them as good as the best possible one.
3. Economic thinking recognizes that individuals make no decisions thinking. No the personal interests (such as thinking) are themselves incentives, as persons to meet their or choose that system or, if other come increase, reject it.
4. Every economic system has several effects. In addition to the direct result of an action, there are secondary effects that also must be identified and considered.
