Neil Krishan Aggarwal's timely study finds that mental health and biomedical professionals have created new forms of knowledge and practice in their desire to understand and fight terrorism. In the process, the state has used psychiatrists and psychologists to furnish knowledge on undesirable populations and psychiatrists and psychologists have protected state interests. Professional interpretation like all interpretations is subject to cultural forces. Drawing on cultural psychiatry and medical anthropology, Aggarwal analyzes the transformation of definitions for normal and abnormal behavior in a vast array of sources: government documents, professional bioethical debates, legal motions and opinions, psychiatric and psychological scholarship, media publications, and policy briefs. Critical themes emerge on the use of mental health in awarding or denying disability to returning veterans, characterizing the confinement of Guantanamo detainees, contextualizing the actions of suicide bombers, portraying Muslim and Arab populations in psychiatric and psychological scholarship, illustrating bioethical issues in the treatment of detainees, and supplying the knowledge and practice to deradicalize terrorists. Throughout, Aggarwal explores this fascinating, troublesome transformation of mental health science into a potential instrument of counterterrorism.

Military Psychiatry in Peace and War Charles Stanford Read, 2015-06-17 Excerpt from Military Psychiatry in Peace and War Notwithstanding the great opportunities for the study of mental disease arising under active service conditions during the late European War little English literature on the subject has been published Though it is more or less universally found that no special war psychosis exists it has been evident that the environment and circumstances of warfare do tend to bring about certain mental reactions which though seen in other situations are not there so common Unfortunately the exigencies of war time precluded most medical officers from devoting time to special study and my work as seen in the following pages has been the product of labour only possible at intervals of leisure now and again The statistical work at a Clearing Hospital is fraught with much difficulty for the following up of 3 000 cases which were dispersed over various parts of the United Kingdom is not a task to be lightly undertaken My medical work during the war has been exceptionally fortunate in that I have been able to gain a wide experience of the manifold mental abnormalities met with Previous to my post at D Block Netley I had charge of neurological wards and I have had the privilege since of visiting all the War Mental Hospitals in France and Great Britain My thanks are due to the War Office authorities for giving me official permission and granting me all facilities for those visits To the various medical officers who so courteously tendered me all available information and thus helped in my work I express my indebtedness Nowhere in these pages is any dogmatic attitude assumed though on some points I have strongly favoured certain views About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
